SUBJECT: "THE LOOTERS"
BY JOHN REESE
BOOK REVIEW

BACKGROUND:

Reese forwarded to the Director an autographed copy of captioned book with this note appended: "Mr. Hoover, You may want this for your files, since it deals in part with the F. B. I. and one of its major problems. I would be interested in any comment you have on it." Receipt of the book was acknowledged, without comment, by letter from Miss Gandy to Reese of 3-1-68.

INFORMATION IN BUFILES:

We have no information in files identifiable with Reese or the bank robbery which he fictionalizes in this book.

BACKGROUND CONCERNING AUTHOR:

According to the jacket of captioned book, Reese "is the author of a number of Westerns and juveniles, as well as stories in all of the most popular magazines such as the 'Saturday Evening Post,' 'Esquire,' 'Atlantic Monthly,' 'Good Housekeeping,' 'Reader's Digest,' etc." (see back page of jacket). "Books in Print" lists a John Reese as the author of several fictional novels during the past 16 years.

SUMMARY OF BOOK:

This book, poorly written, gives a fictional account of a bank robbery which FBI and local police investigation determined to have been committed by organized criminal elements. The book contains no unfavorable references to the FBI except for a few which are attributed to hoodlum characters in the book. The plot also contains a fictional character referred to as Special Agent Damon A. Murray (we have no record of any such current or former employee) who in one instance expresses an awesome (but unwarranted) respect for the organizational efficiency of the Mafia.

SUBJECT: "THE TRIUMPH"
BY JOHN KENNETH GALBRAITH

W. W. Waller
R. G. Smith
Book Reviews

John Kenneth Galbraith, former American Ambassador to India, has published a novel entitled "The Triumph." Galbraith is a Professor of Economics at Harvard University and is a well-known author on economic affairs. Among his books are "The Affluent Society," and "The New Industrial State." Galbraith is currently National Chairman of Americans for Democratic Action.

BRIEF SUMMARY OF NOVEL:

In Galbraith's words, "The Triumph" is a "small fable" relative to American foreign policy. Actually, in style, it is really not a novel but a fictional narrative which tries to bring out Galbraith's views on American foreign policy. It is his way of criticizing American policy and the book is full of lectures and sermons.

"The Triumph" tells the story of a mythical South American country by the name of Puerto Santos (which actually is the Dominican Republic). Puerto Santos is ruled by a dictator whose chief aim is to keep himself in power. He possesses large financial holdings, bilks people and has a large harem of mistresses. However, the dictator (Martinez) in the eyes of the United States is a bulwark against communism. Martinez, however, is overthrown by a moderate liberal by the name of Miro who introduces democracy and modest land reforms. The United States is alarmed. Worth Campbell, a top State Department official, (who obviously is Dean Rusk) works to bring Martinez's son, Juan, to power in Puerto Santos. Young Martinez, in Campbell's eyes, will be like his father, a strong barrier against communism. At the end of the book, young Martinez, however, becomes exceedingly liberal, introduces reforms and gives up much of his personal power. Worth Campbell, of course, is shocked that his policy of using dictators to build up a barricade against communism seems to be going to ruins.

The book primarily is a "spoof" and satire against the State Department Dean Rusk and American policy to uphold dictators in power for the reason of overthrowing communism. He makes fun of the bureaucratic structure of the State Department. He quotes one individual as saying "nothing in our government counts so badly against a man as misjudging someone who turns out to be a communist... fear of being wrong immobilizes both thought and action. I sometimes think the communists worked it out themselves--first they learn to wash the brain and then they freeze it."

MENTIONS OF THE FBI:

Several miscellaneous references are made to the FBI, but nothing of any pertinence. The references are not derogatory.

DATA IN BUFILES RE GALBRAITH:

Bufiles reflect that Galbraith was born on October 15, 1908 in Canada and became a naturalized citizen in 1937. He was the subject of FBI investigations in 1941, 1950, 1961 and 1965. These investigations reflected that Galbraith was closely associated with individuals who were affiliated with communist front groups and, in the case of Corliss Lamont, a Communist Party member. In 1961, Galbraith's name was in the files of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee.

Galbraith is publicly known as a liberal and one who has been a sharp critic of American foreign policy through his participation in the Americans for Democratic Action.

BY GEORGE CARPOZI, JR.

Tr ADJ

Captioned book was sent to the Director, with a press release from Trident Press, the publisher. The release indicates that Carpozi's book is a factual account of Soviet espionage taken from FBI and other official records.

BACKGROUND:

Carpozi co-authored a book entitled "Red Spies in the U.N." published in 5-65. The Bureau furnished limited public source data to Carpozi, and we reviewed his manuscript. We found his book reflected a great deal of fiction and inaccurate reporting; however, it did highly praise the FBI's work in the espionage field.

Subsequently, in 7-65, Carpozi contacted the Bureau about securing our cooperation in connection with his proposed follow-up book about Red spies in Washington. Because of inaccuracies in his first book, it was recommended and approved that we give him limited public source data only. Carpozi was given to understand he was not to indicate he had received any assistance from the FBI, and that the FBI was not responsible for facts or opinions expressed in his book. He was then furnished a limited number of write-ups in mid-1966. 62-46855-

In 11-66, the Bureau received information that Carpozi had contacted a Soviet National and told him he wanted to write a book on American espionage in Russia. It was decided at that time that we would give no further help to Carpozi. It is noted he has not been in further contact with us and did not send us the manuscript of captioned book for review.

danger of Russian espionage. It contains chapters on cases such as the Verber-Ponger case, Nikolai Kurochkin, Gennadiy Sevastyanov, as well as a summary of the 1940 espionage rings in Washington which included Alger Hiss and William Remington. In conclusion, Carpozi strongly defends the FBI's activities and states that citizens must pay no attention to the small faction in this country which would strip us of our functions.

Carpozi has again exercised a good bit of literary license and shows a tendency to exaggerate the truth. A large portion of his book is based on material he received from sources other than the FBI.

BOOK REVIEW
"STUDENT POLITICS"
EDITED BY SEYMOUR MARTIN LIPSET
RESEARCH-SATELLITE MATTER

This memorandum presents a review of captioned book, which is being placed in the Bureau library.

The Book

This book, published in 1967, contains a series of lengthy essays by several authors on student unrest in various parts of the world in an effort to explain the causes, conditions, and consequences of growing student turbulence in the United States. The best essay and the one which contains interesting generalizations is that of the editor and Philip G. Altbach on "Student Politics and Higher Education in the United States."

The Editor and His Collaborator

The FBI has not conducted an investigation concerning Lipset, whose parents were born in Russia. He graduated from City College of New York and received a Ph.D. from Columbia University. He is a Professor of Government and Social Relations at Harvard University and Director of the Comparative Student Project, established by the Institute of International Studies at the University of California at Berkeley, of which he has been Director. He was very active in the American Student Union, cited as a communist front, while in college.

Lipset's collaborator in the best essay, Philip Altbach, is a Lecturer in Education and Research Associate in the Center for International Affairs at Harvard University. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. In 1967, he publicly opposed United States military action in Vietnam.

Memorandum R. V. Smith to Mr. W. C. Sullivan
RE: BOOK REVIEW

FBI Not Mentioned

There are no references to the FBI in this book.

Generalizations

The following are among the generalizations made:

Only a small minority of the total student population in the United States is involved in student political organizations. The political vacuum on the campus makes it easier for a minority to be heard and for it to exercise an influence beyond its numbers. Sheer numbers mean that a relatively small percentage of the student population in large schools can mount a large demonstration. The increasing number of graduate students, particularly in large state universities, provides a major source of encouragement and continuity in leadership for the activist student movement.

Student attitudes reflect the mood of significant sectors of the faculty. Much of the success of the Berkeley revolt was due to the strong support and stimulation from segments of the University of California faculty.

The sons and daughters of one-time Socialists, Communists, and other leftists provide the organizing leadership for demonstrations at many campuses. Certain religious backgrounds, mainly Jewish and liberal Protestant, produce a large proportion of student activists. Those studying social sciences and humanities are more involved than students of other fields. Student protests are particularly successful in the spring.

Conclusions

Lipset and Altbach conclude that radical social movements of any kind have had difficulty becoming established in the United States because of its relatively stable social system and fairly long tradition of political tranquility. Nevertheless, they see a possibility that the new student left of the 1960's may be a precursor to a larger left-wing movement that may bring some changes in American society.

BOOK REVIEW
"EROS AND CIVILIZATION"
BY HERBERT MARCUSE
RESEARCH-SATELLITE MATTER

This memorandum presents a review of captioned book, which is being placed in the Bureau Library.

SYNOPSIS:

Marcuse, a professor in the Philosophy Department, University of California, has been described as the philosopher of the new left. In this book, he attempts to combine the writings of Marx and Freud. He claims that civilization has suppressed man's basic instincts, particularly sexual instincts, in order to produce the necessities of life. Now, however, a level of productivity has been achieved which would permit some release of these instincts, but this is not permitted by those who dominate civilization and want to maintain the status quo. The FBI is not mentioned in this book.

BOOK REVIEW
"EROS AND CIVILIZATION"

DETAILS:

The Author

Herbert Marcuse (pronounced Markooze) has been described as the foremost literary symbol and the philosopher of the new left. He was born in 1898 in Berlin, Germany, immigrated to this country in 1934, and was naturalized in 1940. He was in the State Department from 1945 to 1950. After serving as Professor of Politics and Philosophy at Brandeis University from 1954 to 1955, Marcuse went to the University of California where he is presently a professor in the Philosophy Department. Marcuse has been influenced by the writings of philosopher George Hegel, psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud, and by Karl Marx. He admits he is a Marxist, but feels Marxism must be updated.

FBI Not Mentioned

There are no references to the FBI in this book.

The Book

The ideas in this book, which is subtitled "A Philosophical Inquiry into Freud," were first presented in a series of lectures at the Washington School of Psychiatry in 1950-51. In this book, which was published in 1955, Marcuse attempts to synthesize the writings of Marx and Freud.

Marcuse's Analysis

There follows a condemnation of the analysis of life presented by Marcuse.

Man has two basic instincts. One is the sex instinct or Eros. The other is a death or destructive instinct. The struggle for existence has taken place in a world that has been too poor for the satisfaction of human needs without work for the procurement and augmentation of the necessities of life. This work is normally without satisfaction. Work is more or less painful, while the basic instincts strive for the prevalence of pleasure. Since there is no instinct for work, then the energy required for (unpleasurable) work must be withdrawn from the primary instincts--from the sexual and from the destructive instincts.

Civilization is, generally speaking, founded on the suppression of instincts; it has progressed as organized domination, which has made man the slave of his labor and the enemy of his own gratification. The mode of work has been imposed upon individuals--first by mere violence, subsequently by a more rational utilization of power. No matter how useful this rationality was for the progress of the whole, it remained the rationality of domination, which is exercised by a particular group or individual in order to sustain and enhance itself in a privileged position. The specific interests of domination introduce controls over and above those indispensable for civilized human association.

Desexualization unbinds the destructive impulses as can be seen by the fact that the destruction of life (human and animal) has progressed with the progress of civilization. Cruelty and hatred and the scientific extermination of men have increased in relation to the real possibility for the elimination of oppression.

The excuse of scarcity, which has justified repression of the basic instincts, weakens as man's knowledge and control over nature enhances the means of fulfilling human need with a minimum of toil. A level of productivity has been attained at which the social demands upon instinctual energy spent in alienated labor could be considerably reduced. Consequently, the continued repressive organization of the instincts seems to be necessitated less by the struggle for existence than by the interest of domination. The very achievements of this civilization seem to make the repression of the instincts archaic.

Memorandum R. W. Smith to Mr. W. C. Sullivan

BOOK REVIEW

"EROS AND CIVILIZATION"

Under optimum conditions, the prevalence, in mature civilization, of material and intellectual wealth would be such as to allow painless gratification of needs, while domination would no longer systematically forestall such gratification. Eros would be released to an unprecedented degree. No longer used as a full-time instrument of labor, the body would be resexualized. The body would become an instrument of pleasure.

Observation

It is easy to see the new left's interest in Marcuse's analysis, because the new left is preoccupied with love, sex, and the senses.

BOOK REVIEW

"THE PHILBY CONSPIRACY"

by Bruce Page, David Leitch, and Phillip Knightley

This memorandum is a review of the above captioned book.

BACKGROUND:

b7D

Philby [redacted]

[redacted] defected to Russia in 1963 and is still there. He has written a book in which he states that he was recruited as a Soviet agent in 1933 and operated as such for 30 years.

THE BOOK:

The authors have written a comprehensive review of the entire life of Philby and have obviously contacted any person who had dealings with Philby. The weakest portion of the book deals with Philby's stay in the U.S. from 1949 to 1951 and from this it can be assumed that their sources in the U.S. were not as cooperative as their British sources. The writers also trace the development of Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean as well as Philby from their youth, through college, and their careers in the British Government up until their defection to Russia. In analyzing the actions of these men, the writers feel that they were moved by a "quasi-religious faith" and believed that Russia was better than England because it had adopted communism. They feel that these men were successful because the British society could not comprehend that an Englishman might be "in bond to an alien and all-justifying ideology." They also introduce the theory that British intelligence decided to break Philby when they interviewed him in Beirut, Lebanon, in late 1962 and early 1963 and then frightened him into defecting rather than return him to England to face a trial with all its embarrassing revelations.

RE: BOOK REVIEW, "THE PHILBY CONSPIRACY"

THE AUTHORS:

Page, Leitch, and Knightley are all employees of the "Sunday Times" of London, England. They are part of a group referred to by that newspaper as their "Insight Team" consisting of ten people who spent many months interviewing everyone they could locate who knew Philby.

THE PUBLISHER:

This book is published by Doubleday and Company, Incorporated, and Bureau files show we have had cordial relations with this company.

MENTION OF THE FBI:

There are several places where the FBI is mentioned. For example, on page 159 the authors state that some Agents of the FBI were sent to England in 1943-44 and one of these Agents was "Melvin Purvis, the man who killed John Dillinger." This is of course, not correct since Purvis was not in the Bureau in 1943-44.

Again on page 244 the authors discuss the angry reaction of the Americans to the defection of Burgess and Maclean and Philby's connection with it. They state that FBI men were enraged since their pursuit of Burgess was thwarted and "there was a picturesque moment when a muscular, pistol-toting Agent strode into the British Embassy and demanded to question Philby about the whereabouts of Burgess." This, of course, is completely fictional.

ACTION:

It is recommended that this book be placed in the Bureau Library.

BOOK REVIEW
"ONE-DIMENSIONAL MAN"
BY HERBERT MARCUSE
RESEARCH-SATELLITE MATTER

This memorandum presents a review of captioned book, which is being placed in the Bureau Library.

SYNOPSIS:

Marcuse, a professor in the Philosophy Department, University of California, has been described as the philosopher of the new left and as "the idol of the student rebels." In this, the best-known and most influential of his books, he claims that modern industrial society is repressive and denies development of human freedom and autonomy. Nevertheless, this society provides a measure of prosperity and can accommodate to change without permitting any real and substantial change. While he is critical of this society, he merely offers the Marxist concept of central planning plus effective social control over production and distribution of necessities as an alternative. He also thinks there is little chance for a change from this society unless the exploited and persecuted of other races unite with "the most advanced consciousness of humanity." The FBI is not mentioned in this book.

Memorandum for Mr. W.C. Sullivan
RE: BOOK REVIEW
"ONE-DIMENSIONAL MAN"
100-448771

DETAILS:

The Author

Herbert Marcuse (pronounced Markoosa) has been described as the foremost literary symbol and the philosopher of the new left and as "the idol of the student rebels." He was born in 1898 in Berlin, Germany, immigrated to this country in 1934, and was naturalized in 1940. He was in the State Department from 1945 to 1950. After serving as Professor of Politics and Philosophy at Brandeis University from 1954 to 1965, Marcuse went to the University of California at San Diego where he is presently a professor in the Philosophy Department. Marcuse has been influenced by the writings of philosopher George Hegel, psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud, and by Karl Marx. He admits he is a Marxist, but feels Marxism must be updated. Although he is extremely critical of American society, he has been condemned by the Soviet newspaper, "Pravda," which called him "an agent of the CIA."

FBI Not Mentioned

There are no references to the FBI in this book.

The Book

"One-Dimensional Man," published in 1964, has been described as the best-known, most influential, and most widely read of the books by this author. As are all of his works, this book is heavily laden with philosophical terms; it is difficult to read and all but impossible to understand completely.

Marcuse's Criticism

This book contains a revolutionary criticism of modern industrial society--both communist and capitalist, but with particular emphasis on the United States. It is, he says, an unfree or repressive society of administered individuals that is "irrational as a whole." In this society, the productive apparatus tends to become totalitarian to the extent to which it determines not only the socially needed occupations, skills, and attitudes, but also individual needs and aspirations.

Technology serves to institute new, more effective, and more pleasant forms of social control and social cohesion. Technology provides the rationalization of unfreedom and demonstrates the "technical" impossibility of being autonomous or of determining one's own life. This unfreedom appears neither as irrational nor as political, but rather as submission to the technical apparatus which enlarges the comforts of life and increases the productivity of labor. Technological rationality thus protects rather than cancels the legitimacy of domination.

Marcuse contends that modern industrial democracy has the ability to absorb and accommodate change without permitting any real and substantial change in society. A majority of the workers, especially those in the United States, have been bought off with a measure of prosperity, are kept pacified by television and other mass media, and have become a prop of the established way of life. Therefore, independence of thought, autonomy, and the right to political opposition are being deprived of their basic critical function in a society which seems increasingly capable of satisfying the needs of the individuals through the way in which it is organized.

In his criticism of capitalism, Marcuse states that it retains the social need for private appropriation and distribution of profit as the regulator of the economy. That is, it continues to link the realization of the general interest to that of particular vested interests. In doing so, it continues to face the conflict between the growing potential of pacifying the struggle for existence, and the need for intensifying this struggle; between the progressive "abolition of labor" and the need for preserving labor as the source of profit. The conflict perpetuates the inhuman existence of those who form the human base of the social pyramid--the outsider and the poor, the unemployed and unemployable, the persecuted colored races, the inmates of prisons and mental institutions.

Memorandum for Mr. W.C. Sullivan
RE: BOOK REVIEW
"ONE-DIMENSIONAL MAN"
100-445771

As for contemporary communist societies, Marcuse states that the backwardness, the enemy without, and the legacy of terror perpetuate the oppressive features of "catching up with and surpassing" the achievements of capitalism. The priority of the means over the end is thereby aggravated--a priority which could be broken only if pacification is achieved and capitalism and communism continue to compete without military force, on a global scale and through global institutions. This pacification would mean the emergence of a genuine world economy--the demise of the nation state, the national interest, and national business together with their international alliances.

Comments

While Marcuse is strong on criticism, he is, like most of the New Left, weak on offering a better society. Even his one suggestion sounds like Marxism when he calls for central planning and says that effective social control over the production and distribution of the necessities will achieve for individuals the goal of authentic self-determination.

Marcuse is pessimistic about the possibility of any chance of a change in the one-dimensional society because "the People" who were previously the ferment of social change have "moved up" to become the ferment of social cohesion. He claims, however, that there is a substratum of outcasts and outsiders, the exploited and persecuted of other races and other colors, the unemployed and the unemployable whose opposition to the present society is "revolutionary even if their consciousness is not." There is little chance, he says, that this "most exploited force" will unite with "the most advanced consciousness of humanity"--presumably those who think like Marcuse--to bring about a change in society.

On July 18, 1968, a telephonic inquiry was made by a Special Agent ~~for~~ F. E. Peacock Publishers, Inc., 401 West Irving Park Road, Itasca, Illinois, without inquiry being made by the firm as to the identity of the caller or the Special Agent divulging his identity, as to where the location of a retail outlet could be located where the book "Vietnam: Anatomy of a Conflict" edited by WESLEY B. RISHEL could be purchased. It was determined that the book had not been released for public sale and would not be published for public distribution until August 1, 1968. It was determined further that this book was a form of textbook which contains a collection of articles and observations on the Vietnam war.

The publishers of the book further advised there are no plans to release the book with a publicity campaign of any kind and that the book would not be generally available on the shelves of any retail book store. It was suggested that if an individual desired a copy of the book, the best procedure to follow would be to have a retail book store, of his choice, order the book and the publishers would honor such order from an established retail book store.

The Chicago Office will, UACB, order the book through the personal account of a private individual friend of a Special Agent of the Chicago Office through Kroch and Brentano's, the world's largest retail book store. It is believed that if this procedure is followed, this book can be obtained discreetly and reasonably soon after it is released for public distribution.

He discusses American foreign policy, communism, Government bureaucracy, income tax, the Supreme Court, as well as other topics. He states that America is becoming a nineteenth-century-model European country.

SUBJECT: ELDRIDGE CLEAVER
RACIAL MATTERS - BLACK PANTHER PARTY

Book Reviews

The subject is author of a reported best-selling book, "Soul On Ice" (McGraw-Hill, 1968), a review of which is set out below.

BACKGROUND:

Cleaver is Minister of Information of the Black Panther Party, a black extremist group with headquarters in Oakland, California. He is also reported to be employed by "Ramparts" magazine. He was released from prison in California in 1966 after serving eight years of a fourteen-year sentence on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon which grew out of an attempted rape. He became involved in a gun battle with Oakland police in April, 1968, and his parole was revoked but he was released when a California judge ruled that the state had not shown failure of rehabilitation and that the revocation of his parole was actually based on his "political activities."

BOOK REVIEW:

"Soul On Ice" is a series of essays written by Cleaver while in prison. Cleaver explained he became a rapist "consciously, deliberately, willfully, and methodically" and assaulted white women as an "insurrectionary act."

Cleaver educated himself while in prison. He read and liked Karl Marx because Marx supported Cleaver's hatred for American capitalism. He went through a variety of religious experiences and eventually settled on the Nation of Islam.

Memorandum to Mr. W. C. Sullivan
RE: ELDRIDGE CLEAVER

He claimed he was the NOI leader in San Quentin Prison and while there defected to Malcolm X.

Much of the book is the usual extremist diatribe against the white race. Cleaver calls the "central event of our era" the racial liberation movement abroad and the Negro revolution at home. He refers to American Negroes as the "black Trojan Horse" and prophesied impending doom for the white imperialists.

The Bureau is referred to on page 87 as follows:
"Robert F. Williams was forced to flee to Cuba with the combined terrors of the FBI and the minions of Southern justice snapping at his heels." The Director is referred to on page 113 as follows: "FBI's J. Edgar Hoover, America's flattest foot, periodically issues grave reminders that the left-wingers, having mastered deceit, are almost succeeding in subverting this, and are busily boring from within to take over that."

The book has little value from a racial intelligence standpoint.

BOOK REVIEW

"THE CRITICAL SPIRIT--ESSAYS IN HONOR OF HERBERT MARCUSE"

EDITED BY KURT H. VOLFF AND BARRINGTON MOORE, JR.
RESEARCH-SATELLITE MATTER

This memorandum presents a review of captioned book, published in 1967 by Beacon Press, Boston, which is being placed in the Bureau Library.

BOOK REVIEW

Captioned book is a collection of essays by 26 American, British, French, and German professors and scholars in honor of Herbert Marcuse, a professor of philosophy at the University of California at San Diego, who has been described as the foremost philosopher of the new left.

Essays contained in the first part of the book explore political philosophy through a variety of philosophical approaches delving into its social background, intellectual significance, and history. The separate works are in no way blanket endorsements of Marcuse's concepts. In fact, some make it clear that the scholars have doubts whether political philosophy constitutes an appropriate manner of thinking today or that there even is such a thing as political philosophy.

The book also presents a series of essays which deal with the problem of cultural decay. Each author uses his own method in presenting his interpretation of some aspect of this topic as it relates to Marcuse's interpretation that literature and art were devised, consciously or unconsciously, as a cover for the contradictions of a divided world--the defeated possibilities, the hopes unfulfilled, and the promises betrayed.

RE: BOOK REVIEW

"THE CRITICAL SPIRIT--ESSAYS IN HONOR OF HERBERT MARCUSE"
100-145771

Marcuse's concept of industrial society is given a severe critique in the book. One essay even suggests that his thesis about the capacity of modern industrial society to prevent change by absorbing and deflecting critical opposition may be an example of confusing the present with more permanent trends.

The book ends with an analysis of Marcuse as a teacher. His formal lectures and informal discussions are described as generously spiced with irony and humor directed at "the sacred cows of the Establishment." All of his teaching embodies negative (critical) thinking, which is described as opposing the self-contentment of common sense and is so ready to embrace the given and to accept the established fact.

THE EDITORS

Bufiles reflect that in September, 1963, the name of Kurt Heinrich Wolff was included in a partial list of sponsors of the National Committee to Abolish the House Un-American Activities Committee. Wolff was identified therein as a Professor of Sociology at Brandeis University.

Barrington Moore, Jr., born 5/12/13 at Washington, D. C., is a graduate of Williams College and Yale University. We conducted a Departmental applicant case on Moore in 1942 but no derogatory information was developed. In May, 1961, Moore was listed as a sponsor of an "Open Letter to President Kennedy" condemning U. S. foreign policy in Cuba. Moore made anti-Vietnam policy comments during a speech given at a rally on 2/11/65 at Harvard University sponsored by the Ad Hoc Committee to End the War in Vietnam. In May, 1965, during a discussion on Vietnam policy, Moore also reportedly made the statement: "We have to stop the enemies of freedom at home and let's be blunt about it, Mr. Johnson is one of them." At that time, Moore was reportedly with the Russian Research Center at Harvard University.

BOOK REVIEW
"REASON AND REVOLUTION"
BY HERBERT MARCUSE
RESEARCH-SATELLITE MATTER

This memorandum presents a review of captioned book, which is being placed in the Bureau Library.

SYNOPSIS:

Marcuse, a professor in the Philosophy Department of the University of California at San Diego, has been described as the philosopher of the new left. Captioned book is a historical analysis of the views of philosopher George Hegel. In the book, Marcuse endeavors to show that Hegel's basic philosophical concepts were hostile to the tendencies which led into Fascist theory and practice. Marcuse states that his primary purpose in writing the book was not to revive Hegel, but to revitalize the power of negative thinking. Marcuse, thereafter, discusses Hegel's philosophical theory as it was applied in the socio-historical setting in Germany prior to the reign of Fascism. Hegel's theory was based on the concept of Reason, which Marcuse endeavored to show as being fallible. Through Hegel's concept of Reason, Marcuse claims that it comprehends everything and ultimately absolves everything which, therefore, could be expanded to absolve slavery, concentration camps, and gas chambers. Marcuse then points out that the development of Fascist Germany was anti-Hegelian in all of its aims and principles.

RE: BOOK REVIEW
"REASON AND REVOLUTION"
100-445771

DETAILS:

The Author

Herbert Marcuse (pronounced Markboozs) has been described as the foremost literary symbol and philosopher of the new left, as well as "the idol of the student rebels." He was born in 1898 in Berlin, Germany, immigrated to this country in 1934, and was naturalized in 1940. He was in the State Department from 1945 to 1950. Subsequently, he was affiliated with Harvard and Columbia Universities, and served as Professor of Politics and Philosophy at Brandeis University from 1954 to 1965. He is presently a professor in the Philosophy Department at the University of California at San Diego. Marcuse has been influenced by the writings of philosopher George Hegel, psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud, and by Karl Marx. He admits he is a Marxist, but feels Marxism must be updated. Although he is extremely critical of American society, he has been condemned by the Soviet newspaper, "Pravda," which called him "an agent of the CIA."

FBI Not Mentioned

There are no references to the FBI in captioned book.

Book Review

Captioned book, published in 1941, is a historical analysis of the views of philosopher George Hegel and bears the subtitle, "Hegel and the Rise of Social Theory." In the book, Marcuse endeavors to show that Hegel's basic philosophical concepts were hostile to the tendencies which led into Fascist theory and practice. Marcuse states that the purpose in writing the book was not to revive Hegel, but to revitalize a mental faculty which he felt was in danger of being obliterated--the power of negative thinking. He describes the power of negative thinking as the driving power of dialectical thought, which is used as a tool for analyzing the world of facts in terms of its internal inadequacy.

Memorandum for Mr. W. D. Sullivan

RE: BOOK REVIEW

"TRIALS AND REVOLUTION"

100-448771

While Hegel described the objective world by its various manifestations--Thought, Reason, Spirit and Idea--Marcuse attempts to transcribe it into more modern-day terminology.

The book explains that dialectical thought starts with the experience that the world is unfree--that man and nature exist in conditions of alienation, existing as "other than they are." Freedom is described as the innermost dynamic of existence, and the very process of existence in an unfree world is the continuous negation of that which threatens to deny freedom--i.e., freedom is essentially negative. Marcuse explains that the overall theory functions to break down the self-assurance and self-contentment of common sense, to undermine the sinister confidence in the power and language of facts, and demonstrates that unfreedom is so much at the core of things that the development of their internal contradictions leads necessarily to qualitative change--the explosion and catastrophe of the established state of affairs. Dialectical logic is critical logic, according to Marcuse, and since the established universe of discourse is that of an unfree world, it is necessarily destructive.

Marcuse, in his book, endeavors to explain Hegel's theory as it was applied in the socio-historical setting in Germany prior to the reign of Nazism. Hegel's whole philosophy was based on his concept of Reason, which held that philosophical thinking presupposes nothing beyond it, that history deals with Reason and Reason alone. The State is the realization of Reason alone. Hegel believed that nothing should be recognized as valid except what has to be recognized according to Reason's right. His concept of Reason was related to the French Revolution and he felt that history took a decisive turn upon this event in that man came to rely on his mind and dared to submit the given reality to the standards of reason. Nothing is Reason that is not the result of thinking, according to Hegel.

Memorandum for Mr. W. C. Sullivan
RE: BOOK REVIEW
"REASON AND REVOLUTION"
100-445771

Marcuse explains that the transition from philosophy to the domain of state and society had been an intrinsic part of Hegel's system. Hegel was the last to interpret the world as Reason, subjecting nature and history alike to the standards of thought and freedom and, at the same time, recognized the social and political order man had achieved as the basis on which Reason had to be realized. This concept, according to Marcuse, brought philosophy to the threshold of its negation and is the sole link between the old and the new form of critical theory.

Marcuse, thereafter, attempts to disprove Hegel's concept of Reason as the undialectical element of his philosophy. He expounds that in Hegel's application, Reason comprehends everything and ultimately absolves everything and when expanded may even be used to absolve slavery, child labor, concentration camps, gas chambers and nuclear preparedness. He states that Reason, as the developing and applied knowledge of man (free thought), was instrumental in sustaining injustice, toil and suffering.

Marcuse's summation is that the development of Fascist Germany was anti-Hegelian in all of its aims and principles. He documents the rejection of Hegel's theories pointing out that Hegel's political philosophy was founded on the assumption that civil society could be kept functioning without renouncing the essential rights and liberties of the individual; whereas, Fascism completely rejected this theory.

SUBJECT: "THE DEATH OF A NATION"
BY JOHN STORMER

Reference is made to attached book which was sent to Mr. Hoover without cover letter.

JOHN STORMER

Stormer is well known to the Bureau as the author of "None Dare Call It Treason," a highly controversial book which made unfounded accusations regarding communist infiltration in the U. S.

"THE DEATH OF A NATION"

Stormer's current book follows the lines of "None Dare Call It Treason." He begins by quoting Mr. Hoover's statement, "We are at war with communism..." and uses it to imply that communism is at work behind all of America's troubles, including crime, riots, immorality etc.

He also implies that there are communists in government today and goes on to link U. S. leaders' rejection of God with their inability to cope with communism. He includes criticism of our "no-win" war policy in Vietnam.

A chapter is devoted to immorality and crime among youth which Stormer attributes in part to a communist conspiracy and the failure of parents, churches and educators to properly direct youth.

Another chapter is devoted to churches in America and Stormer is critical of church groups which are a part of the ecumenical movement and National Council of Churches.

Stormer includes a chapter on what it would be NOT RECORDED communism took over America and warns that this will happen if we do not turn back to God. His entire book is filled with quotations from scripture predicting doom for our Nation if we do not have a spiritual awakening.

Over all, the book tends to exaggerate communist influence, and Stormer is quick to take comments of individuals out of context to promote his own viewpoint.

MENTIONS OF DIRECTOR

As indicated above, Stormer quotes from the Director to point up the communist menace. Brief excerpts from Appropriations Testimonies and articles are used to emphasize communist agitation tactics in connection with riots and youth. He indicates that Governor Kerner's fact-finding commission on riots misused Mr. Hoover's name to back the commission's view that communists were not behind the riots. Stormer also includes brief comments of Mr. Hoover on youthful crime and pornography to point up their prevalence in our nation.

You previously have been advised that the captioned publication was coming out in the near future. We have asked our Legat, Bonn, to endeavor to obtain a copy. The book allegedly includes the names plus brief identifying data of members of not only CIA (Central Intelligence Agency) but other U.S. intelligence agencies. The July 24, 1968, issue of "New Times" carries a book review of "Who's Who in CIA" by V. Chernyavsky. The article essentially consists of a typical Soviet attack on CIA. It is also stated that Mader worked with "his international team," and he was assisted by journalists "Mohamed Abdelnabi of Beirut, Ambalal Bhatt of Bombay, Fernando Gamarra of Mexico City and Shozo Ohashi of Yokohama." It is not known how significant these names may be, but it is believed that they are worthy of recording for future reference.

BY GEORGE CUOMO
[O] BOOK REVIEWS

PURPOSE:

To set forth critical remarks in the captioned book concerning the Director and our Uniform Crime Reporting Program.

THE BOOK:

The book cover describes this as "a story about prisoners-- not just prisoners of the state but all of us who live in the prisons of our minds and our society...." The book has three main characters; one is a young exconvict, one is a young man with a television show, and one is an Assistant Warden of a penitentiary. All three are drawn together when the television commentator begins a new type program in which he does interviews with first the exconvict, then a probation officer, then the Assistant Warden, and various other individuals.

As the story progresses, the exconvict again gets into trouble and is sent to the penitentiary. He subsequently gets caught up in the plans of another inmate to beat up a Negro inmate who has recently been transferred as a result of a plan to integrate the penitentiary. The attack on the Negro inmate goes haywire and several of the conspirators beat up the supervisor in charge of the penitentiary garage and hold him and the hobby shop supervisor in the hobby shop which they barricaded against the guards. They demanded the television commentator be their go-between in their negotiations with the Warden, and subsequently hold him hostage as well. During these negotiations a full scale riot breaks out in the prison but is quickly quelled. The young exconvict is finally killed going to the rescue of his friend, the TV commentator, when the leader of the conspirators goes berserk.

MENTION OF THE FBI:

On pages 157 and 158, during the interview of the Assistant Warden, the TV commentator inquires whether he feels the increasing amount of crime is a major national problem. The Assistant Warden replies: "Well, Mr. Hoover seems to think so--but I yield to no man in my lack of admiration for J. Edgar Hoover. Every year his P.R. boys publish a little book of statistics proving that crime is increasing at a phenomenal rate, the point being that to throttle this monster we need more money for the FBI, that we need more arrests and more convictions and tougher sentences. I confess to being unconvinced, even slightly appalled." Asked if he is saying these statistics are "phony," the Assistant Warden replies "I would say they're being used to present this case in the best possible light...." Asked if he feels stricter law enforcement would reduce crime and serve as a deterrent, the Assistant Warden replies that "One hates to go against the confirmed wisdom of both the masses and J. Edgar Hoover himself, but I don't think capital punishment, for instance, is a deterrent or ever was."

The purpose of this memorandum is to evaluate the Book Review Program and to set out its purpose and annual statistics. Book Review Control Desk, established January, 1959, functions as central control for books to be purchased, maintains book review index which includes pending and completed reviews and other data pertinent to each review. Records of book reviews maintained in main control file 62-46855. Purchase of books is brought to attention of Administrative Division. Cost of operation of Desk absorbed by existing Publications Desk. During period 9-29-67 through 9-27-68, a total of 90 books was received at Seat of Government. Thirty-four books were reviewed, 45 were obtained for reference purposes, and 11 were received by the Director and W. C. Sullivan but were not reviewed. Of 24 book reviews completed by Domestic Intelligence Division, seven were done by the Research-Satellite Section. Instructions regarding Book Review Control Desk are included in Section 62, Manual for Bureau Supervisors. Book Review Control Desk performs valuable service because it eliminates duplication both in purchase and review of books, enables Seat of Government personnel to obtain quickly copies of reviews for reference, and, because of knowledge of current publications, frequently alerts personnel to appearance of new books pertinent to work and operations of Bureau. A status report is submitted annually.

Re: BOOK REVIEW: "WHY BLACK POWER?"

DETAILS:

AUTHOR:

Joseph R. Barndt is pastor of St. Philip's Lutheran Church, Oakland, California, according to the book jacket. Bureau files show only that he participated in a protest march 6/30/66 concerning the welfare management system.

BOOK:

It is the author's thesis that "black power" is politics and money, that the goal of black power is for black people to take control of their communities "politically, economically, and socially." The author says the ghetto exists and the present welfare system has completely failed to alleviate poverty.

Black power is needed to end poverty in the ghetto and the reason blacks do not have power to do this today is that "white power" has built U.S. society on a "racist foundation." "White power" has done this, first, for economic reasons, i.e. slave labor and later cheap labor. According to Barndt, the need for cheap labor is not so great today, with automation, but "white power" continues to hold blacks down because the white man is afraid of the black man "physically, emotionally, and sexually." The author claims that welfare programs and public housing are designed to literally keep Negroes "in their place" (out of the white suburbs) and all whites, even those active in the civil rights movement, are guilty of building "white power."

The author feels that the ghetto resident cannot be responsible until he is free; that no man can act responsibly until he has gained freedom. He says the ghetto resident will not be free, and thus responsible, until he "rebels against and defies all the political, cultural, social, and psychological forces that wrongly control him and determine his life." Thus, "rebellion against the unjust forces of control is an act of responsible freedom by which the power of self-determination is achieved."

Re: BOOK REVIEW: "WHY BLACK POWER?"

This relates to civil disobedience, for the author says it is necessary to distinguish between a good law and a good law misused as an evil form of control in order to understand how civil disobedience can be the responsible action of a free man.

Barndt says the riots of past summers are the "nervous breakdowns of a community" as a result of built-up power in his view. He also notes that "police cannot stop a riot; their presence is the catalyst that ensures the intensity and continuation of violence." Barndt does not approve of riots, he says, but adds, "I am still on the side of the people who are rioting; I firmly believe that their cause is just, and that the responsibility for the riots is to be laid on White Power, not Black Power."

MENTION OF THE FBI:

Neither the Director nor the FBI is mentioned in this book.

SYNOPSIS:

Captioned book authored by Ben W. Gilbert, deputy managing director of "The Washington Post," Washington, D. C., reviewed. The book recounts much of the same information which appeared in the daily press during the riot period regarding the nature of the violence and the people involved; difficulties encountered by the police; and related aspects. Chapter X is devoted to an interview of three unidentified Negroes who claimed to be associated with a small group of black revolutionary activists who had worked to keep the riot going. The book points out these individuals made no claim that they or their group were responsible for starting the disorder and that to this extent their story parallels the FBI's assessment that there was no plot or conspiracy to touch off the riot. The Bureau has received no information to substantiate the story told by these faceless informants. Since their identities are not known to the news reporter who interviewed them, it is not felt anything would be gained by going to "The Washington Post" for information regarding them. The Washington Field Office, however, is checking out the reported claims of the three unidentified Negroes through other sources.

Memorandum G. C. Moore to Mr. W. C. Sullivan
RE: REVIEW OF BOOK ENTITLED "TEN BLOCKS
FROM THE WHITE HOUSE; ANATOMY OF
THE WASHINGTON RIOTS OF 1968"
62-46855

DETAILS:

The book entitled "Ten Blocks From The White House; Anatomy Of The Washington Riots Of 1968," authored by Ben W. Gilbert, deputy managing editor of "The Washington Post," has been reviewed. The foreword states that the principal record the book uses is the extensive reporting and photography by the staff of "The Washington Post" during the riot period and the weeks following. It is stated the book endeavors to put together events, to seek patterns of action, and to reconstruct the background of the rioting to aid in an eventual assessment.

The book recounts information regarding the incidents of looting, arson, and other acts of violence during the rioting; the nature of the people involved; difficulties encountered by the police; conflicting views regarding restraint used by the police; delay in utilizing the military; and related aspects. Much of the same information appeared in the daily press during the riot period and immediately subsequent thereto.

Chapter X entitled "All You Need Is a Match, Man" relates the details of an interview of three unidentified Negroes by a Negro reporter of "The Washington Post" some months after the riot, August 8, 1968. According to the news reporter, these individuals, who were wearing hoods at the time of the interview, claimed to be associated with a small group of about 25 black revolutionary activists who had worked to keep the riot going. The three individuals told of specific acts of arson and other violence committed by them and their associates during the rioting and their particular selection of Jewish merchants as targets "because they're the biggest exploiters in the black community."

Memorandum G. C. Moore to Mr. W. C. Sullivan
RE: REVIEW OF BOOK ENTITLED "TEN BLOCKS
FROM THE WHITE HOUSE; ANATOMY OF
THE WASHINGTON RIOTS OF 1968"
62-46855

The book points out that the three unidentified Negroes made no claim that they or their group were responsible for starting the disorder in Washington, D. C., and that to this extent their story parallels the FBI's assessment that there was no plot or conspiracy to touch off the riot. The Bureau has received no information to substantiate the story told by the news reporter's faceless informants. There are a number of black extremists active in the Washington, D. C., area who are prone to making exaggerated statements and threats, and it is typical of such individuals, when given the opportunity to "mouth off" to the press, to make statements they feel will enhance their self-importance. Since the identities of the three individuals are not known to "The Washington Post" reporter who interviewed them, it is not felt anything would be gained by going to "The Washington Post" for information regarding these individuals. However, the Washington Field Office has been instructed to immediately check out the reported claims of the three unidentified Negroes through other sources.

The only other reference made to the FBI in the book is the statement to the effect that Washington police regulations regarding the use of firearms parallels the recommendations of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that a firearm, according to a basic rule in firearms training, is used only in self-defense or to protect the lives of others.

SYNOPSIS:

In his introduction, the author states that American Criminal processes, for too long, have been dominated by an obsessive concern for the 5 to 15 percent of the population who are incorrigible criminals, and the system has ignored the greater needs of the majority. The author states that his book focuses on 12 issues of major concern to the public.

There are many references to the Director and to the FBI throughout the book. The author quotes Mr. Hoover and his views about the Communist conspiracy as related to current crime, rights of the individual, etc. Several references are made as to the authenticity and usefulness of the Uniform Crime Reports. There is a brief paragraph on the Director and Robert F. Kennedy and the wire-tapping disagreement of several years ago. The Director's speech, "The Faith of Free Men," is set forth between pages 6 and 12. The book also contains an article by former Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach. The author speaks well of the exemplary record of effective law enforcement by FBI Agents. An article by James V. Bennett beginning on page 13 indicates "The crime problem is overemphasized." It is his usual type of criticism. This article was reprinted from Harper's Magazine, April, 1964.

All references to the Director and the FBI have been set forth in the details very briefly and by page numbers so they can be located quickly.

Richard D. Knudten, in 4/67, was given permission to include Director's speech "The Faith of Free Men" in forthcoming book; he was told this did not mean endorsement of his book. Field check on Knudten at that time was favorable.

"CRIMINOLOGICAL CONTROVERSIES"

DETAILS:

In his introduction, the author states that American Criminal processes, for too long, have been dominated by an obsessive concern for the 5 to 15 percent of the population who are incorrigible criminals, and the system has ignored the greater needs of the majority. The author states that his book focuses on 12 issues of major concern to the public, which are as follows:

1. The Extent of Crime; 2. Civil Disobedience and Crime; 3. The Law and Abortion; 4. Pornography and The Law; 5. The Police and The Public; 6. Techniques of Apprehension; 7. Pretrial and Trial Publicity; 8. The Right to Counsel; 9. The Jury System; 10. The Juvenile and The Juvenile Court; 11. The Criminal Victim and Social Responsibility; 12. Sex in a Prison Setting.

Page 5: The author says, "In the continuing argument J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, affirms the scope of current crime and relates it to the Communist conspiracy in his address to the Masons in October 1965. However, James V. Bennett, Director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, challenges Hoover's evaluation of the extent of crime and urges 'A Cool Look at 'The Crime Crisis.'"

Page 21: "Even the best index of criminal activity, the FBI Uniform Crime Reports, can only report the crimes known to police. Even then, the Reports do not reveal the occupation, employment status, social class, and ecological characteristics of the criminal. Organized crime, most costly of all crime in America, with its illegal gambling, narcotics, prostitution, labor racketeering, and gang activity remains largely unmeasured."

Page 22-23: These pages are filled with the author's observations on the data contained in the Uniform Crime Reports and the usefulness of the data in these Reports.

Page 24: "Not only are the FBI Uniform Crime Reports generally biased in their conclusions, they are also statistically inaccurate in their categories. Although Thorsten Sellin criticized the FBI crime data before its revision in 1958, his criticism that the United States has the worst criminal statistics of any nation in the western world remains pertinent today."

Page 29: "...former Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach suggests that the civil rights demonstrations are symptoms of greater social problems which must be recognized and treated."

Jones to Bishop Memo
CRIMINOLOGICAL CONTROVERSIES"

Page 33-34: "It also said that the 'demonstrations' there now had been infiltrated and were being led by 'eight to a dozen' ringleaders who are operating under 'pretty good cover'; that at least some of them are known members of the DuBois clubs of America, which Senator Dodd and J. Edgar Hoover have recently described as a 'new Communist-oriented youth organization dominated and controlled by the Communists.'"

"A very recent issue of 'U.S. News & World Report' (May 17, 1965) contains two pertinent articles. One saying that 'increased Communist penetration and influence inside some sections of the Negro movement in the United States is a subject of growing concern to the FBI and White House.' The other saying, 'J. Edgar Hoover, FBI Director, and President Johnson both are increasingly concerned by the growing activity of known Communists on the campuses of colleges around the country. They would like to alert the country to the situation, but are concerned about being considered 'Red-baiters' if they do.'"

"I, for one, would like to lend a voice of encouragement to them to forget those fears and to alert the country fully about the facts, for surely that is their duty and no odium can result from exposing those who are preaching and practicing defiances of our law and, hence, the destruction of our society."

Page 37: "Another of these articles quoted some comments of J. Edgar Hoover about the effects of spreading crime upon the peace and safety of our citizens. He said: 'There is too much concern in this country...for the 'rights' of an individual who commits a crime...'"

Page 39-50: Article by Nicholas deB. Katzenbach titled, "The Civil Rights Act of 1964: Respect for Law."

Page 42: Director is mentioned in Katzenbach's article as having "expressed the deepest concern over youth crime."

Page 43: In Katzenbach's article, it is stated: "The FBI has built a proud body of alumni of its National Academy in police departments all over the country. And our greatly accelerated crime effort has produced leads and information which we have shared, to mutual benefit, with state and local officials."

Page 122: "And J. Edgar Hoover has frequently noted that a police executive 'must have full responsibility for the performance, discipline, and control of his officers.'"

Jones to Bishop Memo
"CRIMINOLOGICAL CONTROVERSIES"

Page 128: As a part of the chapter titled "Civilian Review Boards-- Another View," by Aryeh Neier, it states that "curiously, the man who probably deserves credit for launching the drive for civilian review at that time (1953) was none other than J. Edgar Hoover." The author goes on to explain that in a civil rights case the FBI was not allowed to question New York Police. This incident was the subject of an article in a New York paper (the author states that Mr. Hoover was rumored to have given the story to the paper), and a House Committee investigation resulted. This in turn triggered proposals by the Civil Liberties Union for a civilian review board in New York City; this proposal was adopted by the New York Police Department.

Page 133: "It is frequently charged that civilian review will hamper police effectiveness. FBI officials have been among those making this charge. It is a charge, however, which flies in the face of the FBI's own crime statistics. Philadelphia has had civilian review for the last 8 years, longer than any other city. Of America's 10 largest cities, judging by the FBI statistics, Philadelphia has the highest proportion of arrests for major crimes, and the lowest crime rate of the 5 largest cities."

Page 159: "Even before the Supreme Court's more permissive attitude the United States Department of Justice served notice that it would tap. Originally, in the late 20's and 30's, United States Attorneys General, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, and other federal officers stated they disapproved of wiretapping and did none. However, in 1941, under wartime pressure the Department of Justice declared that wiretapping itself was not illegal under Section 605 so long as there was no divulgence of the information so obtained."

Page 169: Continuing on the subject of wiretapping, the author discusses the FBI's authority to place wiretaps and the denial of Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy that he gave such authorization to FBI Director.

Page 196: Mention is made of former Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach's speech before the American Society of Newspaper Editors in 1965, which indicated that FBI Agents, U.S. marshals, and federal officers were governed by a code of conduct formulated by the Justice Department.

RICHARD D. KNUDTEN:

In 4/67 Knudten requested permission to use "Faith of Free Men" in his book on Criminological Controversies to be published in 1968. Results of an Indianapolis Office discreet inquiry on him at that time indicated he enjoyed an excellent reputation and was well respected. Knudten was given permission to reprint speech and was later sent 1967 Uniform Crime Reports bulletin; he was advised that this was not to be construed as endorsement of his work.

SUBJECT: "ROBERT F. KENNEDY: THE MYTH AND THE MAN" BY VICTOR LASKY
BOOK REVIEWS

SYNOPSIS:

Captioned book (issued 1968) highly critical of the late Robert Kennedy. Previously, Lasky published "J. F. K.: The Man and the Myth" which was critical of President Kennedy. Lasky friendly toward FBI.

Lasky describes Kennedy as "a tough no-holds-barred politician" seeking power and nothing mattered except victory. He paints Kennedy as earthy, colorful figure whom even politicians in his own party feared. "There was little warmth in his icy-blue eyes or his fingertip handshakes." He remained an outsider in the Senate and refused to do the hard work required there. Book highly readable and abounds with stories from all phases of Kennedy's career.

Mr. Hoover and FBI frequently mentioned. An entire chapter (#29) devoted to conflict between Mr. Hoover and Kennedy over wiretapping. Lasky emphasizes Kennedy badly defeated in this encounter. This conflict, according to author, lay in feud between the two men which started after President Kennedy's assassination. He details history of Fred Black and Bobby Baker cases and disclosure by Department of extensive "bugging" during Kennedy's tenure as Attorney General. Kennedy denied any knowledge of listening device in Black's hotel suite. Subsequently, Mr. Hoover "really blew the whistle on Bobby" and Lasky describes documents issued by Bureau to show that Kennedy did have knowledge of electronic devices. For Kennedy it was a losing battle. "Licking his wounds after this painful battle, Bobby was quoted as lamenting that quarreling with the bulldog-tough FBI chief was 'like having a fight with St. George.'" "It was a battle he knew he could not win." President Lyndon Johnson enjoyed Bobby's discomfort. "There were those who believed that Lyndon Johnson had given Bobby the most brutal beating of his young life." Lasky briefly mentions FBI in connection with Hoffa case and 1962 episode involving increase in steel prices.

M. A. Jones to Bishop Memo

RE: "ROBERT F. KENNEDY: THE MYTH AND THE MAN" BOOK REVIEW

DETAILS:

"Robert F. Kennedy: The Myth and the Man" by Victor Lasky (published 1968 by Trident Press) is highly critical of the late Senator Robert Kennedy. Previously, Lasky had published "J. F. K.: The Man and the Myth" which was critical of the life and works of President Kennedy. Lasky has been friendly toward the Bureau and is currently on the Special Correspondents List. He is the co-author (along with Ralph De Toledano) of "Seeds of Treason."

OBSERVATIONS:

Captioned book is marked by extreme hostility to former Senator Robert Kennedy. In a foreword, Lasky says that tragic as was Kennedy's death, "the fact remains that Robert F. Kennedy was a tough no-holds-barred politician constantly engaged in combat; and it does the truth an enormous disservice when his aggrieved friends seek to canonize him as a young idealist seeking power only for the sake of effecting reforms and insuring peace in the world."

Lasky goes on to say that Kennedy was "a professional political gladiator schooled in the rough-and-tumble of electoral combat, taking on all opponents with little regard for the political niceties. Not yet forty-three years of age, Robert Kennedy was one of the most feared men in American politics." This book, the author claims, seeks to show Kennedy as he actually was--"an earthy, colorful figure to whom little mattered but victory."

In just about every role in Kennedy's career, Lasky is critical. For example, he says that Kennedy was "a humorless man. And he was aware of this deficiency. So he deliberately developed the type of self-deprecatory humor that Adlai Stevenson brought to contemporary politics. The only difference is that Stevenson usually made up his own jokes." "Bobby had little taste for the world of ideas. He was not interested in reading long and complex works of literature. But he was aware of the political necessity of developing the kind of intellectual image his late brother projected. Thus, he was often photographed boarding a plane carrying books. But few reporters traveling with him ever saw him crack one."

Other features of Lasky's portrait of Kennedy: "there was little warmth in his icy-blue eyes or his fingertip handshakes." "The truth is that Bobby was not overly endowed with articulateness."

RE: "ROBERT F. KENNEDY: THE MYTH AND THE MAN" BOOK REVIEW

"In the Senate, Bobby remained an outsider... The hard work that is required to get things done in the Senate was not to his liking."

The book is highly readable and abounds with tales and stories from Kennedy's career. Actually, the book is chronological, tracing Kennedy from his birth step by step through his rise to national prominence. Invariably, Lasky is critical of Kennedy, pointing out that at heart Kennedy was "mad for power" and was willing to use any device, person or situation to achieve it. According to Lasky, even politicians in his own party hated and feared him. "But they were afraid of him. Having experienced the Kennedy drive for power through the years, they feared that sooner or later Bobby would occupy the White House. And that's where the power is, baby."

MENTION OF THE FBI

The FBI and Mr. Hoover are mentioned frequently by Lasky. This mention occurs while Lasky is narrating the various episodes in the life of Kennedy.

The most prominent mention of the FBI in relation to Kennedy occurs in Chapter 29 entitled "Wiretapping." In this chapter, Lasky details the dispute between the late Senator and Mr. Hoover over the issue of wiretapping. Lasky emphasizes that Kennedy was badly defeated in this encounter.

"The origins of the Kennedy-Hoover dispute lay in a long-smoldering, little publicized feud dating back to the very first days of the New Frontier. Following President Kennedy's assassination, their relationship ended abruptly. Their only contacts were through formal correspondence and the orders each man issued through his intermediaries. When Bobby resigned as Attorney General in the summer of 1964, it seemed predestined that one day there would be a formal airing of their differences."

Lasky then details the history of the Fred B. Black and Bobby Baker cases. As a result, the Justice Department "had publicized in neon lights that extensive 'bugging' had taken place during Robert Kennedy's reign as Attorney General. Bobby was left with only one obvious out--that these illegal activities were unauthorized--and he rose to the bait." Subsequently, Kennedy denied that he had any knowledge of any installation of a listening device in Black's hotel suite.

"Thus, Bobby sought to put all responsibility for illegal eavesdropping on the FBI. J. Edgar Hoover was infuriated, but he was not saying anything publicly--for the moment. What Bobby was also doing was taking advantage of a semantic opening. In their questions, the reporters had repeatedly used the terms 'wiretaps' and 'wiretapping.' They were clearly unaware of the distinct technical differences between wiretaps and microphone-type listening devices--such as the 'bugs' which the FBI installed in Black's hotel suite and in a number of offices and hotels in Las Vegas during the years of Bobby's 'war' against the underworld. Thus when Bobby was asked whether he had authorized any Las Vegas wiretap, he gave a technically correct answer when he said 'no.' It was a bug, a device which is neither designed nor intended to monitor telephone conversations."

M. A. Jones to Bishop

Later, Mr. Hoover "really blew the whistle on Bobby. He charged that Robert F. Kennedy, as Attorney General, not only knew of FBI eavesdropping in criminal cases but had in fact stepped it up." Lasky then describes the various documents issued by the Director to refute Kennedy's false claims. Lasky comments: "Despite increasing evidence that his memory was failing him, Bobby Kennedy fought back." However, in Lasky's opinion, it was a losing fight. He adds: "Licking his wounds after this painful battle, Bobby was quoted as lamenting that quarreling with the bulldog-tough FBI chief was 'like having a fight with St. George.' Behind the scenes, however, he was making every effort to defuse his quarrel with Hoover. It was a battle he knew he could not win."

President Johnson's "public posture, meanwhile, was that he wanted no part of the feud... There were those who believed that Lyndon Johnson had given Bobby the most brutal beating of his young life. The question was even raised as to whether Hoover had obtained the President's approval before writing his letter to the Republican Congressman (Gross) from Iowa... But there could be no doubt that Lyndon Johnson was enjoying Bobby's discomfiture." The President in his State of the Union Message of January 10, 1967, left Bobby squirming when he denounced all wiretapping and bugging, public and private, except for national security. Kennedy didn't like these remarks and did not applaud them. Lasky quotes the Baltimore "Sun" as saying: "One thing about Bobby we never understood is, he's a skier, football player, mountain climber and all, but he claps like Casper Milquetoast."

Lasky also mentions Kennedy's investigation of James Hoffa of the Teamsters union, starting when Kennedy was chief counsel of the McClellan Committee. However, in this connection, Lasky quotes Newsman Clark Mollenhoff as saying that Kennedy "had shown signs of unsteadiness. He sometimes lost his temper, and occasionally a little-boy impetuosity marred his performance. Members of the press were inclined to give a major part of the credit for those successful investigations to...more experienced members of the staff."

Mention is briefly made of the FBI during Kennedy's investigation of Hoffa. In one instance, mention is made that Mr. Hoover visited Kennedy's office and indicates that the FBI was involved in the investigation too. Lasky also mentions the incident involving the action of President Kennedy and Attorney General Kennedy (1962) relative to the increase in prices by the steel companies. Lasky is again critical. "However, Bobby's unorthodox behavior during the flap over steel prices in the spring of 1962, aroused considerable concern. FBI agents had been dispatched in the middle of the night to interview newspaper reporters on some aspects of the steel story. Columnist Max Lerner found the episode 'distasteful' and smacking of a 'police operation.' The Richmond 'Times-Dispatch' described it as an 'indefensible abuse of personal power by a hired public servant.' "

In other instances, Lasky mentions that Senator Kennedy was angry about Lasky's critical book, "JFK: The Man and the Myth," and had instituted an investigation. "At first, under prodding from then Senator Kenneth Keating of New York, Attorney General Kennedy flatly denied that he had ever authorized such an investigation. Later--after evidence was produced--Bobby finally conceded that an 'overzealous' official had launched the probe without his approval. It was also learned that the FBI had been asked to conduct the investigation but that J. Edgar Hoover had refused to involve the Bureau in what was strictly a 'political vendetta.' "

Lasky quotes the Director as being against any type of all-powerful Federal police agency.

The book of Lasky's is in the FBI library.

The Catholic Church and Cuba
(Program of Action)

The Catholic Church, whose headquarters is in Rome, is a reactionary organization that promotes anti-revolutionary activities in democratic countries. In order for democratic countries to continue their progress on the road toward socialism and communism, it is necessary, first of all, to eliminate the influence of this Catholic Church and its activities. The Catholic Church is not sterile or impotent; on the contrary, one must recognize its power and take measures to place obstacles on its path.

When the political struggle and the forces of production achieve a high level of production, then it can be destroyed. That is the goal for which we struggle. To attack it openly and jeer in its face, while we are badly equipped and while we have not been able to educate the masses conveniently, will have no other result but to give the church an even greater ascendancy over the masses, because the latter will then be on its side and will secretly approve of its anti-revolutionary activities. It is also necessary to avoid having the anti-revolutionary leaders of the church appear as martyrs. The line of action to be followed against the church consists of instructing, educating, persuading, convincing and, little by little, awakening and developing in full the political conscience of Catholics by obtaining their participation in study circles and political activities. We must undertake the dialectic struggle at the very heart of religion, through the "activists" (Militant communists¹). Eventually, we will replace the religious element with the Marxist element. Gradually, we will transform the false conscience into a true conscience, so as to lead the Catholics to their own destruction and that of the holy images that they have created themselves. That is our line of action in our struggle for victory over the antirevolutionary Catholic church.

(1) Translator's explanatory note.

Later, we will present a program of tactics that were used successfully in the People's Republic of China in order to free the Chinese people from the influence of the imperialistic Roman Catholic Church.

It is necessary to lead the church and its faithful to take part in the people's regime so that the masses can exercise their influence upon them. The Church must not be allowed to maintain its supra-national character, which places it beyond the will of the masses. A bureau in charge of religious affairs and organizations should be created in the heart of the people's government. By imposing on the church the procedures of democratic centralization, one opens the way, through the masses, to patriotic measures that will weaken the Church and reverse its prestige. This bureau would organize the local, regional and national associations in order to bring Catholics into patriotic organizations. Each association would manifest its respect to the laws of the nation and its will to abide by them.

After these associations are created and have expressed their obedience to the laws of the nation, then the reactionaries and the anti-revolutionaries will appear. These anti-revolutionaries that arise from the midst of the Catholic Church are the first that should be firmly rooted out, but without using violence. In every instance, the measures that are taken should be in accordance with the law. By their own nature, anti-revolutionary aspirations lead to actions against the government. This principle indicates the kind of laws that must be applied against those that protest. They must be considered as antipatriotic criminals that follow the imperialistic instructions issued from Vatican City.

During this period, the masses will go through a psychological conflict; because, on the one hand, they will feel loyalty toward the church and the clergy and on the other, their patriotism will force them to support the people's government. This conflict should be tested and studied attentively. If one agitates without regard for this conflict, the party might be isolated from the masses. If the bonds between the masses and the Church are too strong, then one should follow the principle of taking two steps forward and one backward. To take this step backward, the people's government should declare that it defends religious freedom and that it was following the will of the masses when it established reform committees within the organizations so that the patriotic masses could express themselves more directly in the management of the affairs of the Church.

Let us be alert. The party militants should direct the work of the reform committees. These should weed out the reactionaries that are found within the masses. To do this, one must abide by the following guidelines: it is patriotic to support the government and obey the law; disobedience is unpatriotic; organizations must express their patriotism; unpatriotic individuals should be weeded out of the organizations and judged as criminals by the patriotic masses, because it is every citizen's duty to punish criminals. The militants should lead the masses against the criminals. As soon as the masses condemn the criminals and weed them out of the associations, they should be judged according to the dispositions of the laws of the people's government. At the same time, the associations should again profess their submission to the law and should make an effort to discover anti-revolutionary activities that are hidden within the associations themselves.

After the reactionaries have been exposed, the psychological conflict should continue among the masses. It is important to have the ecclesiastical authorities and the leaders of the Church assure the people that religion has been purified, now that it has been freed of criminal and antipatriotic individuals. It is the task of our militants belonging to those associations to get the church leaders to issue such statements. Our militants should also assure the masses that the government and the party abide by their will. Naturally, during this period, other disagreements will occur. If one acts arbitrarily, one will lose control of the movement of the masses. The government should encourage the discussion of all these disagreements. During these discussions, one should take care to discover the anti-revolutionaries that have passed undetected until then. During this period, as in the preceding one, the same guidelines are to be followed: it is patriotic to abide by the laws; disobedience is criminal and unpatriotic; etc. The masses should be informed of the results of the conversations between the State and the Church, as well as of the patriotic rebirth of the religious masses, in order to do away with decadent, imperialistic and unpatriotic feelings. With the exception of spiritual matters, every indication and every expression of alliance with Vatican City should be spurned because they would be motivated by imperialistic interests and would be in support of anti-revolutionary activities. Due to the Catholic Church's worldwide expansion, these experiences constitute irrefutable proof of its conspiracy. It is to be expected that during this period Vatican City will issue statements of protest against our campaign. Such protests should be used as new proof of the conspiracy of the church, directed from Vatican City.

This leads to the next stage of our attack: its object is the liaison existing between the Church and Vatican City. Of course, the clergy will react violently to this attack because it will feel hit at its very foundation and source of power. The clergy must then be reminded that it is the object of such an attack because of its liaison with the Vatican and that its protests are unpatriotic and in opposition to the laws of the State. They must also be made to feel that what they represent is unpatriotic. Our militants' task is to convince the masses that the individual can have his religion without Vatican City, which directs the affairs of all the churches of the world. At the same time, our militants should explain the principle of coexistence of patriotism and religion. This way we can isolate from the masses those who follow the orders of the Vatican, and we can pave the way for the establishment of an independent Church.

We must launch a campaign of preparation before a Church can be proclaimed as independent. Those members of the clergy that have not been persuaded to submit to the will of the people's government will be denounced to the masses. We can profit from their protests by using them to destroy their influence over the masses. The best way to do this is through a simple and anonymous kind of work. Our militants should launch their accusations against these individuals. History furnishes proof of the possibility of legal action against those who oppose the separation of the Church and the Vatican. During this stage, we must assemble all the arguments necessary to convince the Catholic intellectuals of the fact that a break with the Vatican is a step forward and not a step backward. The legal dispositions that protect all religions and the history of the different Protestant movements will help convince the intellectuals. At the same time, our militants' task will be able to get all the Catholic organizations, as a group, to request from the government the authorization to establish an independent Church; thereby removing from the Catholic organizations any blame of lack of patriotism caused by those elements still attached to the Vatican. The people's government will give the authorization, and the independent Church will be organized. One must bear in mind that the break between the Catholic Church and the Vatican has no importance to anyone but the theologians. In their religious practices, the masses are only remotely connected with the Vatican.

We have now reached the last stage. After the separation of the Church from the Vatican is an accomplished fact, we can have Church leaders consecrated that have been chosen by us. This will provoke a cry of protest from the Vatican and a major excommunication. We must make it understood that the struggle takes place far removed from the faithful and not in their midst. Catholic organizations will continue to function and the masses will be encouraged to practice their religion at the new Church. If we act with tact and sagacity, the liturgy will not be destroyed and the masses will only see very little differences in the new Church. The protests of the Vatican concerning the episcopal consecrations will only be regarded by the higher ranks of the Church and the people's government will be in charge of suppressing the Vatican's complaints. Thus, little by little, the "old guard" of the Vatican will be isolated. Once isolated, the action against it will become more and more legal, because it (the old guard) will have a violent need of protest and of playing a martyr role. As a result of this, it will only commit itself to unpatriotic actions.

In order for our struggle against the Catholic Church to be victorious, we must employ persuasion in dealing with the clergy rear guard. Upon seeing such a moderate attitude, the masses will understand that the people's government is truly being careful in securing religious freedom for everybody. And, at the same time, the protesters will be placed among those who oppose the wishes of the people and of the government.

Once the time has come when the pillars of ecclesiastical responsibility are in our hands and submitted to the government of the people, then we can proceed toward the progressive elimination of those elements of the liturgy that are incompatible with the people's government. The first changes will affect the sacraments and the prayers. Later, we will protect the masses from coercion or pressure to go to church, practice their religion or organize groups representing religious sects.* As everyone well knows, from the moment that the practice of religion becomes an individual responsibility, it is slowly forgotten. New generations will replace the old, and religion will only be an episode of the past, worthy of mention in the history of the world communist movement.

L'EGLISE CATHOLIQUE ET CUBA

(Programme d'action)

L'Eglise catholique, dont le siège est à Rome, est une organisation réactionnaire qui suscite des activités contre-révolutionnaires au sein des démocraties populaires. Pour que les démocraties populaires puissent continuer à progresser par le chemin du socialisme et du communisme, il est nécessaire tout d'abord d'en finir avec l'influence de cette église catholique et avec les activités qu'elle déploie. L'Eglise catholique n'est ni stérile, ni impuissante; au contraire, il faut reconnaître son pouvoir et prendre toute une série de mesures pour y faire obstacle.

Quand la lutte politique et les forces de production auront atteint un haut niveau de production, on pourra alors la détruire. Tel est l'objectif à atteindre et pour lequel nous luttons. Donner un assaut de front et frapper en face, tant que nous serons mal équipés et tant que nous n'aurons pas éduqué convenablement les masses, n'aurait d'autre résultat que de donner à l'Eglise un empire encore plus grand sur les masses, car celles-ci alors se sentiraient de son côté et appuieraient clandestinement ses activités contre-révolutionnaires. Il faut éviter également que les leaders contre-révolutionnaires de l'Eglise apparaissent comme des martyrs. La ligne d'action à suivre contre l'Eglise consiste à instruire, à éduquer, à persuader, à convaincre et peu à peu à éveiller et à développer complètement la conscience politique des catholiques en obtenant leur participation à des cercles d'études et à des activités politiques. Nous devons entreprendre la lutte dialectique dans le sein de la religion au moyen « d'activistes » (militants communistes [1]). Progressivement nous remplacerons l'élément religieux par l'élément marxiste, graduellement nous transformerons la conscience fausse en une conscience vraie, de sorte que les catholiques en viennent éventuellement à détruire de leur propre mouvement, et pour leur propre compte les images divines qu'eux-mêmes avaient créées. Telle est notre ligne d'action dans la lutte pour la victoire contre l'Eglise catholique contre-révolutionnaire.

Plus loin, nous présenterons un programme de tactiques employé avec succès dans la République Populaire Chinoise, pour libérer le peuple chinois de l'influence de l'Eglise catholique, impérialiste, de Rome.

(note explicative du traducteur)

Il faut amener l'Eglise et ses fidèles à prendre part au régime populaire afin que les masses puissent exercer leur influence sur eux. On ne peut pas permettre que l'Eglise conserve son caractère supra-national qui la place au-dessus de la volonté des masses. Il faut créer au sein du gouvernement populaire un bureau chargé des affaires et des organisations religieuses. En imposant à l'Eglise les processus du centralisme démocratique, on ouvre la voie, au moyen des masses, à des mesures patriotiques qui affaibliront l'Eglise et renverseront son prestige. Ce bureau organisera des associations nationales, régionales et locales qui grouperont les catholiques en organismes patriotiques. Chaque association rendra manifeste sa soumission à l'égard des lois de la nation et sa volonté de les observer.

Quand ces associations auront été créées et qu'elles auront professé leur soumission aux lois de la nation, c'est alors que surgiront les réactionnaires et les contre-révolutionnaires. Ces contre-révolutionnaires surgis du milieu de l'Eglise catholique sont les premiers qu'il faut extirper avec fermeté, sans cependant faire usage de la violence. Dans tous les cas, les mesures prises doivent l'être en accord avec la loi. Par leur nature, les aspirations contre-révolutionnaires conduisent à des actions contre le gouvernement. Ce principe nous indique quelles sortes de lois il faut appliquer contre ceux qui protestent. Il faut les considérer comme des criminels antipatriotes qui suivent les instructions de caractère impérialiste émancées du siège de l'Eglise catholique, de la Cité du Vatican.

(1) Note explicative du traducteur.

Pendant cette période, les masses expérimenteront un conflit psychologique car, d'un côté, elles sentiront de la loyauté à l'égard de l'Eglise et du clergé et, de l'autre côté, leur patriotisme les poussera à appuyer le gouvernement populaire. Il convient de sonder ce conflit et de l'étudier avec attention. Si on agit précipitamment, sans tenir compte de l'acuité de ce conflit psychologique, on risque d'isoler le parti de ces masses. Si les liens entre les masses et l'Eglise sont très étroits, il faut suivre le principe des deux pas en avant et un pas en arrière. En faisant le pas en arrière, le gouvernement populaire doit affirmer qu'il défend la liberté religieuse et que c'est par la volonté des masses qu'il établit des comités de réforme dans les associations pour que les masses patriotiques puissent s'exprimer plus directement dans la direction des affaires de l'Eglise.

Soyons vigilants. Les militants du parti doivent diriger le travail des comités de réforme. Ceux-ci doivent écarter les réactionnaires que l'on rencontrera parmi les masses. Pour ce travail, il faut suivre ces consignes : il est patriotique d'adhérer au gouvernement et d'observer les lois; la désobéissance est antipatriotique; les associations doivent professer leur patriotisme; les éléments antipatriotiques doivent être écartés des associations et jugés comme criminels par les masses patriotiques, car c'est le devoir de tout citoyen de châtier les criminels. Les militants doivent diriger les masses contre les éléments criminels. Dès que les masses auront condamné les criminels et les auront écartés des associations, ceux-ci devront être jugés conformément aux dispositions des lois du gouvernement populaire. En même temps, les associations devront de nouveau professer leur soumission aux lois et s'efforcer de découvrir dans leur sein les activités contre-révolutionnaires cachées.

Bien que les réactionnaires aient été découverts, le conflit psychologique doit continuer parmi les masses. Il est important que les autorités ecclésiastiques et les chefs de l'Eglise assurent à celles-ci que la religion est devenue plus pure, maintenant qu'elle a été libérée des éléments criminels et antipatriotiques. Nos militants qui font partie de ces associations ont l'importante tâche d'amener les chefs de l'Eglise à faire ces déclarations. Nos militants doivent également assurer aux masses que le gouvernement et le parti observent leur volonté. Bien entendu, pendant cette période, d'autres désaccords surgiront. Si on agit arbitrairement, on perdra le contrôle du mouvement des masses. Le gouvernement populaire doit faire pousser à fond la discussion de tous les désaccords. Pendant ces discussions, on doit prendre soin de découvrir les contre-révolutionnaires qui, avant, étaient passés inaperçus. Pendant cette période, comme pendant la précédente, les mêmes consignes s'imposent : il est patriotique d'observer les lois; la désobéissance est antipatriotique et criminelle. On doit également informer les masses des résultats des conversations entre l'Etat et l'Eglise, ainsi que de la renaissance patriotique des masses religieuses, en voie de se substituer aux sentiments décadents, impérialistes et antipatriotiques. A l'exception des affaires spirituelles, tout indice ou toute expression de liaison avec la Cité du Vatican devra être honni, car motivé par des intérêts impérialistes et appuyant des activités contre-révolutionnaires. L'expérience des pays frères prouve que l'Eglise catholique a toujours soutenu les activités contre-révolutionnaires. Etant donné l'extension mondiale de l'Eglise catholique, ces expériences constituent des preuves irréfragables de sa conspiration. Pendant cette période, on peut s'attendre à ce que la Cité du Vatican émette des protestations contre notre campagne. Ces protestations doivent être utilisées comme de nouvelles preuves de la conspiration de l'Eglise que dirige la Cité du Vatican.

Ceci nous amène à la phase suivante de notre attaque; son objet est la liaison existant entre l'Eglise et la Cité du Vatican. Il faut prévoir que, pendant cette attaque, le clergé va réagir avec violence parce qu'il se sent touché dans son point d'appui et à la source même de son pouvoir. On doit lui rappeler que ses protestations contre les attaques dont il est l'objet à cause de son attachement au Vatican sont antipatriotiques et en opposition avec les lois et avec l'Etat. Egalement, on doit lui faire sentir que ce qu'il incarne est antipatriotique. Nos militants ont pour tâche de convaincre les masses que l'individu peut avoir sa religion sans que la Cité du Vatican dirige les affaires de toutes les Eglises du monde. Egalement, nos militants doivent expliquer le principe de la coexistence du patriotisme et de la religion. Ainsi, on écarte des masses ceux qui suivent les ordres du Vatican, et l'on ouvre le chemin à l'établissement d'une Eglise indépendante.

On devra faire une campagne de préparation avant qu'une Eglise ne puisse être proclamée indépendante. Les personnalités cléricales qui n'auront pu être persuadées de se soumettre aux volontés du gouvernement populaire seront dénoncées devant les masses. On profitera de leurs protestations pour détruire leur influence sur les masses. La meilleure tactique pour cela consistera à faire un travail simple et anonyme. Nos militants doivent lancer les dénonciations contre ces personnalités. L'histoire fourmille de preuves sur la possibilité d'une action légale contre ceux qui s'opposent à la séparation de l'Eglise et du Vatican. Au cours de cette phase, on doit rassembler tous les arguments nécessaires pour convaincre les intellectuels catholiques que la rupture avec le Vatican est un pas en avant et non pas en arrière. Les dispositions légales qui protègent toutes les religions et l'histoire des différents mouvements protestants aideront à convaincre ces intellectuels. En même temps, nos militants auront pour tâche d'amener les associations catholiques, en un mouvement d'ensemble, à demander au gouvernement populaire l'autorisation d'établir une Eglise indépendante afin de laver les associations catholiques de toute tache antipatriotique causée par quelques éléments encore attachés au Vatican. Le gouvernement populaire donnera l'autorisation et on organisera l'Eglise indépendante. On doit avoir présent à l'esprit que la rupture entre l'Eglise catholique et le Vatican n'a d'importance que pour les théologiens. Les masses, dans leurs pratiques religieuses, ne sont que faiblement reliées au Vatican.

Nous voilà arrivés à la dernière étape. La séparation de l'Eglise et du Vatican étant consommée, nous pouvons faire sacrer les chefs de l'Eglise choisis par nous. Ceci provoquera la plus vive protestation du Vatican et une excommunication majeure. Il faut faire comprendre que la lutte a lieu loin des fidèles et non point dans leur sein. Les associations catholiques continueront à fonctionner et les masses seront encouragées à pratiquer leur religion dans le sein de l'Eglise nouvelle. Si l'on agit avec tact et sagacité, on ne détruira pas la liturgie et les masses n'apercevront que peu de différences dans l'Eglise nouvelle; les protestations du Vatican contre les consécration épiscopales n'atteindront que la hiérarchie de l'Eglise et le gouvernement du peuple se chargera de repousser les plaintes du Vatican. Peu à peu, on isolera ainsi la « vieille garde » du Vatican. Ainsi isolée, l'action contre elle deviendra de plus en plus légale, car elle éprouvera un violent besoin de protestation et de jouer aux martyrs. En conséquence de cette attitude, elle ne pourra que se compromettre dans des actions antipatriotiques.

Bien que notre lutte contre l'Eglise catholique soit déjà victorieuse, il nous faut employer la persuasion à l'égard de l'arrière-garde du clergé. Par cette attitude modérée, les masses comprendront que le gouvernement populaire a véritablement le souci d'assurer la liberté de religion à tout le monde. Et, en même temps, on place les protestataires parmi ceux qui s'opposent au sentiment du peuple et du gouvernement.

Une fois venu le moment où les postes de responsabilité ecclésiastique seront entre nos mains et soumis au gouvernement populaire, on procédera à l'élimination progressive des éléments de la liturgie incompatibles avec le gouvernement populaire. Les premiers changements affecteront les sacrements et les prières. Ensuite, on protégera les masses contre toute pression et toute obligation de faire acte de présence à l'église, de pratiquer la religion, ou d'organiser des sociétés dépendant de quelque groupe religieux (1). Lorsque la pratique de la religion ne devient plus qu'une responsabilité individuelle, celle-ci, on le sait bien, s'oublie lentement. Les nouvelles générations succéderont aux anciennes et la religion ne sera plus qu'un épisode du passé, digne d'être traité dans les histoires sur le mouvement communiste mondial.

(1) « Luego se protegerá a las masas contra coacción y presión a asistir a la iglesia, a practicar la religión ó a organizar grupos colectivos representando cualquiera secta religiosa. »

Kennedy And Sirhan Why?

Title ; Table of Contents

SIRHAN'S MOTIVE?

RFK Killing Laid to Israel Issue

A book purportedly explaining why Sirhan Bishara Sirhan allegedly assassinated U.S. Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was released Thursday on the six-month anniversary of the slaying.

Dr. M. T. Mehdi, secretary general of the Action Committee on American-Arab Relations, presented the book at a news conference, less than an hour after Sirhan won a month's continuance for his trial.

The trial of the 24-year-old Jordanian immigrant was slated to begin Monday, but Superior Judge Herbert V.

Walker postponed it until Jan. 7.

The new book, titled "Kennedy and Sirhan, Why?" contains 100 pages and was begun June 6, the day Kennedy died.

Kennedy was gunned down at the Ambassador Hotel the day before, minutes after he claimed victory in California's Democratic presidential primary.

The book, completed in early September, Mehdi said, deals with the "psycho-social-political forces which shaped Sirhan's mind and led him to commit the alleged act.

"Sirhan, being a sensitive man, was incensed by the pro-Israel remarks of Robert Kennedy," Mehdi said.

"The real target of Sirhan's bullet — if he indeed committed the act — was (President) Lyndon Baines Johnson, because Johnson sealed the fate of the nation of Palestine," Mehdi claimed.

It was Johnson, Mehdi asserted, who helped "bring about the total destruction of Sirhan's people."

Sirhan, Mehdi continued, "has to be understood as the survivor of an act of genocide committed against his people by Zionist Jews, who themselves are survivors of an act of genocide committed by the Nazis."

Sirhan, in Mehdi's opinion, acted alone, "there was no conspiracy."

Nor, to Mehdi's knowledge, did Sirhan belong to any pro-Arab organization.

Mehdi said he sent the first copy of his book to Sirhan inscribed:

"May God forgive us all as individuals and societies for it was our failure which led you to your desperate decision of June, 1968."

The second copy, Mehdi said, was sent to the only surviving Kennedy brother, U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, inscribed:

"May God give you the instrument to take the initiative against Zionism so that your brother's death shall not have been a wasted tragedy."

Mehdi, who lives in New York, said he had never communicated orally or in writing with Sirhan, who is locked in a tight security cell on the 13th floor of the Hall of Justice.

The writer said he had met with Sirhan's family and had discussed the defendant with "his friends and associates."

He described the family as quiet and pretty much "self-contained."

The proceeds from the sale of the volume, Mehdi said, would be used to help finance a drive to stop the United States from selling 50 Phantom jets to Israel.

If the sale is not stopped, the arms race in the Middle East will continue and may soon lead to another Vietnam, Mehdi declared.

Memorandum to W. C. Sullivan
RE: BOOK REVIEW "BLACK RAGE"
BY WILLIAM H. GRIER AND
PRICE M. COBBS

Although many of the views presented may be accurate, the book is not objective. It is dedicated to "our intrepid black brothers" and exhorts them to "keep on keeping on." While illustrating the black man is far from perfect, and supporting this with case after case, the Negro's plight is shown as caused by being denied the ability to determine his destiny by factors existing in this country which make the white man dominant.

On page 65, for example, it is pointed out that one of the constant themes in black folklore is the "bad nigger," feared as much by blacks as by whites. The authors contend the bad nigger is bad because he has been required to renounce his manhood to save his life.

Later, it is pointed out that the racist tradition is pervasive and envelopes every American. One psychiatric patient purportedly stated that the black man in this country fights the main event in Madison Square Garden every day. Again, it is the black man struggling for survival in a white society that smothers him.

The crumbling of the family structure is described as responsible for a great many of the problems of black people in America. The Negro family is in deep trouble. It is coming apart, if it ever existed, and is failing to provide the foundation that black children need. The authors contend the Negro family is weak and relatively ineffective because the United States sets its hand against black people. By its wealth, size, and overwhelming number of white citizens, this country prevents black families from protecting their members.

The caption of the last chapter is the same as the title of the book, and here the authors come out swinging, as though it is the ninth inning of a baseball game or the last round of a heavyweight title bout. Here, too, the lack of objectivity becomes all the more apparent. Black extremist Malcolm X is described as the man in this fateful century who history may show as most magnificently illustrating the breadth or grand potential of the human race. Malcolm is said to be an "authentic hero" and the black people's black shining prince.

The book concludes with what could be a threat, a warning, or a promise: "If existing oppressions and humiliating disenfranchisements are to be lifted, they will have to be lifted most speedily, or catastrophe will follow."

This book undoubtedly illustrates the thinking of a large segment of the Negroes in America. It, therefore, could be of value in the Bureau's work by helping Agents conducting interviews of black extremists, and other Negroes, to better understand the people with whom they are dealing.

BOOK REVIEW

"The Last Year of Malcolm X,
The Evolution of a Revolutionary"
By George Breitman

This memorandum presents a review of captioned book, published in 1967 by Merit Publishers, which is being placed in the Bureau Library.

SYNOPSIS:

The author, a Socialist Workers Party national committeeman, traces the last year of Malcolm X's life from his split with the Black Muslims in March, 1964. He shows how Malcolm changed from the black separatist of the Muslims to the revolutionary who was finally assassinated by those who could not answer, frighten, buy or corrupt him. The author attempted to show through Malcolm's speeches and interviews the gradual changes of his ideology until he was fast becoming the revolutionary leader of the black movement within the United States.

RE: BOOK REVIEW

"The Last Year of Malcolm X,
The Evolution of a Revolutionary"
By George Breitman

DETAILS:

REVIEW OF BUREAU FILES:

The author is a national committeeman of the Socialist Workers Party and a former editor of "The Militant," a publication of that organization. He is the subject of a Bureau investigation and his name is included on the Security Index.

BOOK REVIEW:

The author outlines the change in Malcolm's philosophy from his split with the Black Muslims in March, 1964, until his assassination in February, 1965. Malcolm split with Elijah Muhammad and the Nation of Islam (NOI) when he made his now famous (Chickens Come Home to Roost) speech in December, 1963, nine days after the assassination of President Kennedy, attributing Kennedy's death to the climate of hate and violence that white people had created or tolerated. For this speech Malcolm was suspended from the NOI and he officially broke with them in March, 1964, and organized his own group known as Muslim Mosque, Incorporated. Prior to leaving the NOI Malcolm was a believer in black separatism who rejected American society, whereas after the split he began to move toward how to change the society.

The author divides Malcolm's last year into two periods: A transition period and a final period. In the former, Malcolm adopted positions which he reversed in the final period. His attitude toward white supporters of the freedom struggle changed from one of refusing to acknowledge their existence to one of praising their efforts. He first declared intermarriage of races was harmful but later changed his position to regard intermarriage as a personal matter between two human beings.

The author describes Malcolm as a radical both before and after leaving the Black Muslims. After the split he was a revolutionary becoming increasingly anti-capitalist and pro-socialist as well as anti-imperialist. Malcolm was an ardent reader of "The Militant" and after the split became increasingly friendly with American revolutionary socialists. He was a pro-socialist but not a Marxist. He was rapidly becoming the revolutionary leader of the black movement within the United States. He was assassinated by those who could not answer, frighten, buy or corrupt him and whose power and privileges were seriously threatened by this new movement.

After Malcolm's travel to the Middle East and Africa in 1964, his speeches indicated he was greatly influenced by the new African countries and their revolutionary leaders. He came to believe that Afro-Americans must depend upon international allies. He changed from a belief in black separatism to black nationalism and began to work for black unity prior to complete integration of the races.

No mention is made of the FBI in the book.

BOOK REVIEW "READY TO RIOT"
BY NATHAN WRIGHT, JR.
RACIAL MATTERS

This memorandum presents a review of captioned book, published in 1968, by Holt, Rinehart and Winston, which is being placed in the Bureau Library.

The book is a study of the socio-economic causes of the racial disturbances which erupted in Newark, New Jersey, in July, 1967. It presents a detailed study of the population shifts within the main areas of Newark following the conclusion of World War II to 1967, and the resultant drain on the city's financial capabilities as a result thereof. It decries the fact that both white and Negro middle and upper class citizens deserted the inner city for refuge in the suburbs thus leaving those least capable of coping with their problems in the city to fend for themselves. The book makes the point that black people of Newark, and similar cities throughout the country, are not in need of poverty programs, urban renewal, job training, integration or public welfare, but require status and the ability to achieve equitable power relationships with those who have been controlling them. In short, the author favors the black power movement which, to him, means nonviolent economic and political power exercised by and on behalf of the Negroes. He stresses the need of bringing status to the Negroes as the result of coordinated relationships by white and black leadership personnel, as well as through Federally financed programs in order to prevent future riots.

The author is Executive Director of the Department of Urban Work of the Episcopal Diocese of Newark, New Jersey. An ordained minister, he served as leader of the Third National Black Power Conference held in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in 1968, and as Chairman of the National Black Power Conference in Newark, New Jersey, in 1967. He has also served in an official capacity with the Congress of Racial Equality, a militant civil rights organization. His book does not mention the FBI.

BOOK REVIEW

"REVOLUTION IS MY PROFESSION"

BY ED BUTLER (EDWARD SCANNELL BUTLER)

INTERNAL SECURITY - NEW LEFT MATTER

This memorandum presents a review of captioned book, which is being retained in the Communist Infiltrated and New Left Groups Unit, Internal Security Section, Domestic Intelligence Division.

SYNOPSIS: Butler, avowed anti-Communist, is Executive Vice President of Information Council of the Americas (INCA), a New Orleans based organization formed in 1961 to distribute anti-Communist educational material to Latin American countries. Main theme of book is that government should not fight Communism alone, nor even carry main burden, but private professionals, whom he calls "Conflict Managers," should extend work where it is improper for government to go. As a Conflict Manager ("professional revolutionary anti-tyrannist") himself, Butler offers curative for "psychological warfare" which has erupted in America today consisting of following formula for destroying Communist organizations: 1) ISOLATE Party from manpower, money, and materiel, requiring work by Conflict Managers outside Party, to be accomplished by relentless exposure and discrediting of Communist operations; 2) PENETRATE Party, requiring work by Conflict Managers within Party; 3) DEMORALIZE Party, requiring combination of two above tactics, coordinated by one or more Conflict Managers. Butler believes Communists using hippie and New Left element to subtract productive citizens from "Establishment" with no place for them in proposed "Soviet America" and that one task of Conflict Management is to convince New Left of this and channel their revolutionary know-how toward freedom from this tyranny. Butler envisions day when Conflict Managers will be trained like doctors and lawyers in colleges of Conflict Management. They in turn will educate public in this field. Book contains two matter-of-fact, non-derogatory references to FBI.

Memorandum for Mr. W. C. Sullivan
BOOK REVIEW
"REVOLUTION IS MY PROFESSION"
BY ED BUTLER (EDWARD SCANNELL BUTLER)

DETAILS:

The Author

Butler, in his 30's, is Executive Vice President of Information Council of the Americas (INCA), a New Orleans based organization formed in April, 1961, to distribute anti-Communist educational material to Latin American countries. He attended Loyola University for two years and the U. S. Army Management School, as a member of the staff, for two years; served in the U. S. Army, from which he was separated in 1958; worked for an advertising agency as an artist and Account Executive for approximately nine months; and prior to the formation of INCA was Executive Director of Free Voice of Latin America, an organization headquartered in New Orleans which broadcast and otherwise disseminated information to Mexico, South and Central America in an effort to insulate the mass opinion of those countries against communism.

Butler confronted Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin of President Kennedy, in a panel debate on radio station WDSU, New Orleans, August 21, 1963, just a few weeks prior to the President's murder. The third participant in the debate was Cuban exile leader Carlos Bringuier. From this contact, Butler formed the opinion that Oswald was a rational and wholly indoctrinated procommunist individual who exhibited no outward manifestation of any kind of psychotic activity. Butler expressed the belief that the motivating cause behind Oswald's actions was the tremendous amount of communist indoctrination he had received, while residing in Russia and through his extensive reading of communist propaganda. An article in "The Times Picayune," New Orleans, 1/22/63, quotes Butler as stating that "Jim Garrison's probe of an alleged New Orleans plot to kill President John F. Kennedy must be 'relentlessly pursued'."

Butler has from time to time furnished information concerning INCA to this Bureau for its information.

FBI Mentioned

There are two matter-of-fact references to the FBI in captioned book, neither of which is derogatory.

Book Review

Captioned book, published in the Fall of 1968, sets out the foundation for the new profession of what Butler calls "Conflict Management." He states that as a "Conflict Manager" ("professional

Memorandum for Mr. W. C. Sullivan
BOOK REVIEW
"REVOLUTION IS MY PROFESSION"

revolutionary anti-tyrannist") he works ceaselessly to create revolutions leading to liberty in oppressed nations. An avowed anti-Communist, Butler strives to prove that revolution is the only way to liberate one billion people who live under political tyranny, without global war. He states that Conflict Managers are supported by private citizen patrons, through organizations called "Conflict Corporations" and through specified links with conventional institutions. When working to create a revolution leading to liberty in an enslaved country, Butler calls the Conflict Manager a "Liberator;" when working to eliminate conflict leading to tyranny in a free nation, he calls him a "Monitor." Thus, Liberation + Monitorship=Conflict Management: the profession of Free Revolutions.

Butler theorizes that the Communists are using the hippie and New Left elements to subtract productive citizens from the "Establishment," thereby weakening its structure. He believes the Communists have no place for this element in their proposed "Soviet America" but have merely harnessed their minds and bodies to seize power and that one of the tasks of Conflict Management is to convince the New Left, particularly the students, of this fact and channel their revolutionary know-how toward freedom from this tyranny. He states that if the United States succeeds in getting through the Summer of 1969 without a Communist take-over, a neo-Nazi revival, or racial massacre, the odds will begin to change, and the way to buy that time is to alert enough Americans to the immediate danger and give them the leadership needed to "navigate the perplexing path of revolt."

Butler vehemently exhorts that the entire global mechanism of Marxism-Leninism must be smashed and that the battle must be waged by the people, not governments. He stated the United States today, in its quest for peace, has only the options of diplomatic negotiations (which may degenerate into piecemeal surrender) or military adventures (which may escalate into thermonuclear war). According to Butler, the United States finds itself in deep trouble today because two branches of its Government--the Executive and the Judiciary--have gradually drifted in the direction of dictatorship, at the expense of the Legislative Branch; repeatedly, since the end of World War II, the Judiciary has decreed law, and the Executive has waged war, without really consulting the people or the Congress; as a result, psychological warfare erupted in America itself. As a curative, Butler presents the Conflict Management plan with the following formula for destroying Communist organizations:

- 1) ISOLATE the Party from manpower, money and materiel, requiring work by Conflict Managers outside the Party. Isolation is to be accomplished by relentless exposure and discrediting of Communist operations.
- 2) PENETRATE the Party, requiring work by Conflict Managers within the Party. A suggested plan of procedure is to attend a Communist front meeting, express sympathy for the cause, and wait for a letter or phone call. Then gather intelligence; create splits within the Party; recruit other penetrators; promote failures of Communist operations; and depart dramatically--when it is time to go, do it in a public, proud way, thereby taking as many people as possible with you.
- 3) DENORMALIZE the Party, requiring a combination of two tactics above, coordinated by one or more Conflict Managers.

Butler's main theme is that government should not fight Communism alone, nor even carry the main burden, but that private professionals (Conflict Managers) should extend the work where it is improper for government to go. He envisions the day when Conflict Managers will be trained like doctors and lawyers in colleges of Conflict Management. They in turn will educate the public in this field.

This memorandum presents a review of captioned book, which is being retained in the Communist Infiltrated and New Left Groups Unit, Internal Security Section, Domestic Intelligence Division.

SYNOPSIS: Hoffman, head of Youth International Party (YIP) and self-admitted anarchist and revolutionary artist, is on Security Index of New York Office. Captioned book, a great portion of which was written while author under influence of LSD, is filled with extreme obscenities and referred to by Hoffman as "a book of garbage," an excellent appraisal. His account of March on Pentagon, October, 1967, is merely obscene descriptions of actions of demonstrators and conflict between them and authorities. He calls Chicago demonstrations at Democratic National Convention (DNC) in August, 1968, "the Perfect Mess," adding "We had won the Battle of Chicago. I knew we had smashed the Democrats' chances and destroyed the two-party system in this country and perhaps with it electoral politics." Hoffman obsessed with idea of developing "a free America," to be brought about by destroying property and abolishing work and is fervent admirer of Castro; he feels since Castro has made such gigantic strides in creating "a free society" in 11 years, it is possible for revolutionaries in America to do likewise. Numerous uncomplimentary references to FBI in book, such as Hoffman's comment on DNC demonstrations: "In a Perfect Mess everyone gets what he wants. In a Perfect Mess only the System suffers. The road into Chicago begins and ends in your own head. Daley and the FBI will enter by finding a conspiracy." He then sets forth other well known names and his opinion of how they will relate to the "Perfect Mess."

BOOK REVIEW
"REVOLUTION FOR THE HELL OF IT"
BY ABBIE HOFFMAN (ALIAS "TREE")
100-449923

DETAILS:

The Author

Free, in reality Abbie Hoffman, is the 32-year-old co-founder of the Youth International Party (YIP), a New York based group which was formed in early 1968 for the purpose of conducting a "Festival of Life" during the Democratic Convention in August, 1968, in Chicago. Hoffman is on the Security Index of the New York Office.

Hoffman has been arrested on numerous occasions during demonstrations against U. S. policy at home and abroad, including the demonstration in Washington, D. C., October 21-23, 1967, protesting the war in Vietnam. He participated in the Columbia University uprisings in New York, and during an interview regarding these activities in May, 1968, on the Chicago CBS television program "At Random" stated he was in favor of the overthrow of the United States Government by any means possible. He was one of the leaders of Democratic Convention protestors in August, 1968, and is presently free on bond on charges of resisting arrest and disorderly conduct resulting from his appearing in public at that time with an obscene word printed on his forehead. In November, 1968, he was convicted on a charge of mutilating an American flag as a result of his reporting to hearings of the House Committee on UnAmerican Activities in October, 1968, wearing a star spangled red, white, and blue shirt. He was sentenced to pay $100 or spend 30 days in jail. The sentence has been delayed pending appeal.

On September 18, 1968, during a press conference in Chicago, Hoffman stated he does not need money, does not work, and does not ever plan to work because he is a passive revolutionary artist. He observed everything is free, "Who needs money?" He reported he is in the process of completely redeveloping New York City and has things well under way. From 14th Avenue on he said things are well organized, "free sex, free narcotics, the world is a ball."

FBI Mentioned

There are numerous references to the FBI in captioned book, some of which are set forth below:

Page 9: "Paul Krassner, who was watching television, shouted that Stokely had just returned and had been grabbed by the FBI." This sentence was thrown into the middle of Hoffman's description of an LSD party.

Page 122: Hoffman's comment on the Chicago demonstrations during the Democratic National Convention in August, 1968: "Chicago was, as I have stated before, a Perfect Mess. In a Perfect Mess everyone gets what he wants. In a Perfect Mess only the System suffers. The road into Chicago begins and ends in your own head. Daley and the FBI will enter by finding a conspiracy." He then sets forth other well known names and his opinion of how they will relate to the "Perfect Mess."

Page 206: Captioned book contains two pages of acknowledgements to "friends." Many of the names listed are in argot or appear to be take-offs on names of well known persons. Included is "J. Edgar Freako."

Page 209: Referring to his arrest by police on September 17, 1968, as he stepped from an airplane in Chicago: "When bail was produced on this charge, I was then arrested by the FBI and charged with 'crimes aboard an aircraft'. The FBI is the only agency in the country that arrests you and makes it seem like they are doing you a favor." There then follows his version of the interview with FBI Agents, which contains nothing derogatory concerning this Bureau.

Book Review

Captioned book, published in November, 1968, is written in the first person, is filled with extreme obscenity, and covers Hoffman's impressions of the March on the Pentagon in October, 1967, and the demonstrations at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in August, 1968.

In the first paragraph of the book, Hoffman states: "The other day I took some LSD somewhere in the Florida Keys, where I've come to try to write a book." He later refers to the book as "a book of garbage," with which statement it would be difficult to disagree, but it is not difficult to believe that a great portion of it was written while Hoffman was under the influence of LSD. He makes constant reference to being "stoned," "smashed," and "going on LSD trips."

Memorandum for Mr. W. C. Sullivan
BOOK REVIEW
"REVOLUTION FOR THE HELL OF IT"
BY ABBIE HOFFMAN (ALIAS "FREE")

Speaking of the Youth International Party (YIP) philosophy, Hoffman says: "Clarity is not one of our goals. Confusion is mightier than the sword! . . . We have totally destroyed words and replaced them with 'doing'--action becomes the only reality . . . If the straight world understood all this (obscene), it would render us impotent, because understanding is the first step to control and control is the secret to our extinction."

Hoffman is obsessed with the idea of developing what he calls "a free America," which he says will be brought about by destroying property and abolishing work; yet one of his favorite mottoes is "Make Love, Not War." He claims he is not interested in whether someone is for or against the Yippie movement so long as each person "does his thing"--the thing he wants most in life to do, be it "punching a marshal, jumping a wall, doing a dance, singing a song, painting or blowing up a building."

Insisting that the Yippies are not part of the New Left, Hoffman makes derogatory remarks about the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and the National Mobilization Committee (NMC). He claims to have outgrown the New Left in that disciples of that movement are for sacrifice, dedication, and responsibility and are filled with anger, frustration, and guilt, whereas he and his followers believe in having fun and doing only what they want to do.

Hoffman's description of the March on the Pentagon was told through the haze of an LSD trip and consists of nothing but obscene descriptions of the actions of the demonstrators and the conflict between them and the authorities.

About the Chicago demonstrations during the Democratic National Convention in August, 1968, which Hoffman calls "The Perfect Mess," he says: I can only relate to Chicago as a personal anarchist, a revolutionary artist." He offered the opinion that had the demonstrations lasted another week "We would have gotten the cops to assassinate Humphrey. We had won the Battle of Chicago. I knew we had smashed the Democrats' chances and destroyed the two-party system in this country and perhaps with it electoral politics."

Page 130: In an interview with Senator McCarthy, Mailer told the Senator that he would have made "a perfect chief for the F.B.I.," to which McCarthy allegedly replied: "Of course, you're absolutely right."

Page 146: Mailer stated he had gone to Humphrey's private headquarters one night very late during the Democratic Convention where there was nobody to receive him "but six or eight young Secret Servicemen or F. B. I. with bullet-faces, crew-cuts, and an absurd tension at the recognition of his name."

Page 158: Mailer predicted that years of sabotage are ahead and said they would be giving engineering students tests in loyalty before they were done and that the F.B.I. would come to question whoever took a mail order course in radio.

Page 214: With reference to the "establishment," Mailer classified its members as "all the bad cops, U. S. marshals, generals, corporation executives, high government bureaucrats, rednecks, insane Black militants, half crazy provocateurs, Right-wing faggots, Right-wing high-strung geniuses, J. Edgar Hoover, and the worst of the rich surrounding every seat of Establishment in America."

Book Review

Captioned book, published in October, 1968, is called by the author, who was present at both conventions, "an informal history of the Republican and Democratic Conventions of 1968," but is actually more of a study of Mailer's innermost reactions to the two conventions, the individual candidates, and their supporters, in relation to his own philosophy. It is written in his usual obscene and bitter style.

The first section of the book is devoted to the Republican Convention and is entitled "Nixon in Miami." Mailer states he has disliked Nixon intimately ever since his Checkers speech in 1952 and has never written anything nice about him, but listening to Nixon's speeches during the Republican Convention he finds himself believing that Nixon has changed from the "Tricky Dick" of old. Mailer decides he must have become a "closet Republican" because of his sympathy with the Republican Party when Nixon emphasized the need to return to individual human effort; however, this section of the book ends with Mailer being indecisive about Nixon, not knowing whether he was ready to like the candidate or detested him for his "resolutely non-poetic binary system, his computer's brain, did not know if the candidate were real as a man, or whole as a machine, lonely in his sad eminence or megalomaniacal, humble enough to feel the real wounds of the country or sufficiently narcissistic to dream the tyrant's dream."

Because the reporters were kept waiting at a press conference with Ralph D. Abernathy during the Republican Convention, Mailer decided he was getting tired of Negroes and their rights and was weary to the bone of listening to Black cries of Black superiority, which definitely was not in line with his previous concepts and writings; however, he emerges at the end of the book calling all left-wing "blacks" his "polemical associates" and asserting his determination to vote for no one, unless for Eldridge Cleaver.

The second section of the book is entitled "The Siege of Chicago." Mailer expresses his belief that President Johnson, using Mayor Daly as his instrument, deliberately plotted to crack his Party in two because that Party had been willing to let him go. He claimed that President Johnson completely controlled the Democratic Convention, although he never appeared there in person to speak, and intimated that the police brutality exhibited during the demonstrations was at the President's express command.

Mailer chastises himself throughout the second section of the book for not joining the demonstrators during the first days of the convention. Although he knows he belongs with them, he rationalizes that he cannot afford to be injured or jailed because he has a book to write and must cover the Convention; however, he is haunted by the fact that the real reason may be that he is afraid. When he finally spoke at a meeting of the demonstrators on August 28, 1968, after fortifying himself with several drinks, he was so pleased with himself that he felt there was no rank in any Army suitable for him below the level of General. He stated, "It was something to discover the secret source of the river of one's own good guts or lack of them. And booze was no bad canoe."

Memorandum for Mr. W. C. Sullivan
BOOK REVIEW
"MIAMI AND THE SIEGE OF CHICAGO"
BY NORMAN MAILER
100-370923

Before allying himself with the demonstrators, Mailer was watching the conflict between the police and the demonstrators from the 19th floor window of his hotel. He stated he could then understand how Mussolini's son-in-law had been able to find the bombs he dropped from his airplane beautiful as they burst because as he watched the clubbing, gassing, and chaos below him he felt a sense of calm and beauty. He stated it was as if the war had finally begun, and this, therefore, was a great and solemn moment.

Mailer vacillates greatly in his thinking, making this book difficult to read and impossible at times to comprehend. While he calls himself a revolutionary and states he belongs in England, where one's radicalism might never be tested, he loathes the thought of living anywhere but in America where he has been allowed to write and earn a good income. At the same time, he calls the Yippies and like groups his "troops" and his "children."

Memorandum to Mr. W. C. Sullivan
RE: BOOK REVIEW
"REBELLION OR REVOLUTION"
BY HAROLD WRIGHT CRUSE

DETAILS:

REVIEW OF BUREAU FILES

Harold Wright Cruse is a Negro, born March 8, 1916, at Petersburg, Virginia. He served in the United States Army from 1941 to 1945 receiving an honorable discharge. He has been a writer and critic since World War II and a member of the Communist Party from 1947 to 1952. He was employed by the Daily Worker for which paper he wrote reviews from 1949 to 1951. He was removed from the Security Index in 1955 and has been interviewed several times by the FBI but furnished only limited information concerning his Communist Party activities. This is the second book by Cruse, the first being the "Crisis of the Negro Intellectual" which was reviewed by the Domestic Intelligence Division on May 1, 1968.

BOOK REVIEW

The central theme of this book is that the Negro movement in this country before it can become a revolutionary movement must first attain cultural equality in the fields of art, film, theater, radio, television, and music.

Throughout the book Cruse is critical of the Communist Party for its grave mishandling of the Negro question and its lack of understanding of the Negro movement which he also offers as his reasons for leaving the Party.

The book traces the history of the Negro movement examining and endeavoring to explain the impact that the various leaders, writers, thinkers, performers, and organizations have had on the movement. In this regard, the book contains material of reference value concerning the history of the Negro movement in America.

MENTION OF THE FBI

Neither the Director nor the FBI are mentioned in this book.

Re Bureau letter to Los Angeles dated 12/4/68, regarding purchasing a copy of the book "Kennedy and Sirhan...Why?" written by MOHAMMED T. MEHDI and published by the New World Press.

A copy of referenced letter is enclosed to New York for information.

On 12/28/68, SA LESLIE F. WARREN observed that MEHDI appeared as a guest on the Joe Pyne Show aired on KTTV, Channel 11, Los Angeles, 10:30 P.M. to midnight.
MEHDI had presented a copy of his book "Kennedy and Sirhan
...Why?", a paperback, to PYNE, who reviewed it and questioned its contents. In substance, MEHDI alleged that SIRHAN SIRHAN, who is charged with the murder of Senator ROBERT F. KENNEDY, was a victim of the ill-treatment of the Arabian countries by the United States and other countries in establishing the state of Israel from Arabian territory. Further, that the subsequent support of Israel by the United States and particularly President JOHN F. KENNEDY and Senator ROBERT F.
KENNEDY, at the expense of Arabian countries, was largely responsible for SIRHAN's actions.

JOE PYNE challenged MEHDI on his allegations which resulted in some explosive comments on the part of both. MEHDI brought out that the book was in the process of being published and was expected to be released in the immediate future.

SA WARREN on 1/3/69, ascertained by unidentified telephone calls to Pickwick Books, 6743 Hollywood Boulevard, Los Angeles, telephone 469-8191, and World Book and News Company, 1652 North Cahuenga Boulevard, Los Angeles, telephone 465-4352, that the book "Kennedy and Sirhan...Why?" was not on the market. Further, that the book was known to both firms, who had received calls on it as a result of its review on the Joe Pyne Show on television. A recontact by unidentified telephone call to the Pickwick Books on 1/16/69, disclosed that the book was not in distribution yet and it was not known when it would be. On 1/16/69, a personal pretext inquiry with a man managing World Book and News Company disclosed that although this company eventually expected to handle the book in question, they had not received any copies and had no knowledge when they would receive copies for sale.

Both of the above book stores are two of the principal distributors of books, particularly paperback novels, in the Los Angeles area. On 1/16/69, an unidentified telephone call to California Magazines, Incorporated, 2219 South Union Avenue, Los Angeles, telephone 747-9563, one of the major distributors of paperback books in the Los Angeles area, resulted in the stated fact that this firm had not been aware of the book written by MEHDI.

On 1/3/69, an unidentified telephone call to a female secretary in the office of the Joe Pyne Show, KTTV, 5746 Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, California, failed to reveal when the book "Kennedy and Sirhan...Why?" would be released. This girl said that Mr. MEHDI had told JOE PYNE that it would be released in the immediate future. She examined the copy which had been given to JOE PYNE and said its cover listed the publisher as the New World Press, 135 East 44th Street, New York, New York, 10017. It was a paperback and had the price thereon as $1.95. She did not know the whereabouts of Mr. MEHDI, whether he was in Los Angeles, New York or where.

In view of the above, New York is being requested to attempt to obtain a copy.

LA 62-6714

Los Angeles indices contained no references identifiable with the New World Press. Several references identified MEHDI. The "Los Angeles Times," page G-4, 6/9/68, in an article regarding the assassination of Senator ROBERT F. KENNEDY, referred to Dr. MOHAMMED T. MEHDI as Secretary of the Action Committee on American Arab Relations in New York, who made comments on the background of SIRHAN. Other sources listed the address of the above committee as 441 Lexington Avenue, New York City, New York.

BOOK REVIEW

This book consists of a collection of articles, manuscripts, letters, essays and documents that trace the Black Power revolt from its early embryonic stage to its present full-grown adult life. Among its numerous contributors, are well-known black extremists Stokely Carmichael, Leroi Jones, Ron Karenga, Malcolm X, Nathan Hare, Elijah Muhammad, Robert F. Williams, Floyd McKissick and Julius Hobson. Typical of the statements made by the individual contributors are the following:

"Black Power cannot be established within the white power structure...black and white can never come to exist as equals within the same space" (Leroi Jones);

"Integration is a subterfuge for the maintenance of white supremacy...racism is exploitation maintained either actively or through silence by the society as a whole" (Stokely Carmichael);

"The struggle for world freedom must move to the left toward socialism...The economic system must be based upon the socialist economics of Karl Marx" (Julius Hobson).

The book, in addition to containing the various ideas of the individual contributors shows that Black Power is nothing new but merely a revival.
